WOMEN LOSE BEAUTY; THEY SHOULD NOT THINK

FRENCH DOCTOR SPRINGS SENSATION OF CENTURY; EX-ARCHDUKE LEOPOLD OF AUSTRIA AGAIN IN LIMELIGHT OF DIVORCE COURT

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, July 4.—Ex-Archduke Leopold of Austria, legally known in Europe as Leopold Wolfling, a Swiss citizen of Zong, near Zurich, is still going strong in the long distance marriage stakes. In the courts at Munich he is the willing respondent in a divorce suit and I am told that he has an immediate third marriage in view as soon as the divorce court routine is through.

The present "archduchess" was Fraulein Marie Ritter, formerly in domestic service in Germany, and the couple were married at Zurich six years ago. Afterward they traveled a good deal, making their homes at Zurich, Paris and Munich.

When Wolfling's sister, Princess of Saxony, eloped with Giron to Geneva, Wolfling was awaiting her in this town with Mlle. Adamovitch, the beautiful Austrian actress, whom he married a few months later. The couple went to live at Zong and became Swiss.

At the end of two years Mme. Wolfling entered the "simple life," a divorce followed, and the archduke remarried.

Drink to Humble Monk.

"To Perignon, humble Benedictine monk and discoverer of champagne," the members of the Club des Cent—the Hundred club—have just raised their glasses during their annual pilgrimage to Rheims. The members of the Hundred club are automobilists, gourmets and good fellows. A necessary qualification for membership is that you shall—in your own automobile have traveled, I forgot how many, but certainly a good many thousand miles over the pretty roads of fair France. And the main purpose of the club is to restore to France its ancient primacy in the kitchen.

Its members tour France, like modern Diogeneses, in search of an honest innkeeper. They have a map of their own in which they mark with crosses of merit the inns in which they have met in Burgundy. This year their annual banquet was held at Rheims, which is, as you well know, the center of the champagne country. In the coming year of grace they hope to visit and sample Bordeaux.

M. Perignon was the cellarer of the Abbaye d'Hauvillers, toward the end of the Seventeenth century. It was he who first substituted corks for the greasy plugs then used to stop wine bottles—they are still employed by the way in Italy for Chianti flasks. But that great boon, as it was, was as nothing compared to his second discovery, that of champagne.

Discoverer of Champagne.

Like all great discoveries the discovery of champagne literally burst upon M. Perignon. The year had been a rather inferior one in the quantity of vintage, and the quality had been unequal. So that knowing old dog, Father Perignon, tried a mixture of different grapes to see what would come of it. And one evening, as he was inspecting with a loving eye the long serried lines of bottles, the miracle happened. There was a joyous pop, and then another. All along the line the newly-bottled ranks ran a fusillade of corks.

Father Perignon ran forward and caught in the goblet he always carried at his girdle a few drops of foaming amber torrent. Never had such nectar tickled his experienced palate. He crossed himself, thanked heaven and went to spread the good news among his fellow monks. What matter that of a year's vintage nothing remained—champagne had been discovered.

Feminine Beauty Fades.

A French doctor has discovered that ladies are not so beautiful as they used to be. The reason is that women are studying too much and playing too many games. What they ought to do is to sit still, eat plenty and not think.

But that is not all. The daring doctor has still another prescription. "The wife who wishes to be really beautiful," he says, "should bear at least three children."

2,000 Mourners Follow Remains to Cemetery to Get Few Small Coins

PARIS, July 4.—In the town of Isle-sur-Sogne an old maid died a few days ago and fully two thousand "mourners" followed her mortal remains to the cemetery. She was comparatively unknown except to her immediate neighbors, but a story was sent broadcast that the old woman had left instructions in her will to distribute a small sum to each person who should see her buried, at the gate of the cemetery after the ceremony. For this purpose she had collected one hundred pieces of money, valued at 5 cents each, and also set apart $20 for the funeral music accompanying her hearse.

These stipulations were scrupulously carried out, and after being played into the cemetery with all the famous "dead marches," the mourners indulged in such a contest for the small coins at the gate that a strong force of police, gathered in anticipation, had to interfere to restore order.

ZOOLOGICAL KERCHIEF IS LATEST IN LONDON

LONDON, July 4.—The zoological handkerchief is the latest fashion here, and you are not up-to-date if the likeness of your favorite pet is not embroidered on the corner of your handkerchief.

If you have a favorite donkey you must have it embroidered in the corner of your handkerchief, and if you have a passion for goldfish the globe in which they swim should be represented in the same manner.

The newest handkerchiefs for women, which are very small and fragile, are embroidered in the corner with flowers, fruit and vegetables and every kind of bird and animal.

The "black cat" handkerchief, a black cat supposed to be lucky, is one of the most popular of the animal handkerchiefs.

Canaries, parrots, dogs, horses, cats, flowers growing in flower pots—all are depicted on the handkerchief to express the fancy of the owner.

Futurist handkerchiefs with wild designs are shown here with very bright coloring. Some of these have a futurist border of red apples and splashes of color, while others have a blob of color in the center. Colored handkerchiefs are very fashionable.

'Widow of Zabern' Is Most Prosperous Woman in Germany

BERLIN, July 4.—One of the most prosperous women in Germany at the present time is Frau Ewers, who is likely to be known to fame as the "Widow of Zabern." During the "Army vs. People" episodes in Alsace-Lorraine last winter she eked out a humble existence as a tobacconist. Her shop was near the public square in which Colonel von Reuter's troops overawed the populace after arresting the town judge, public prosecutor and 30 other civilians.

At the court she gave evidence in favor of the officers, and civilians boycotted her shop. A statement to that effect was published broadcast in the German press, and Frau Ewers began to receive checks and orders for cigars and tobacco from all parts of the country. Most of them came from army officers or ex-officers and were accompanied by words of gratitude for her patriotic conduct.

Each of her new customers seemed to take it upon himself to secure orders for the widow, with the result that she had to engage assistance. Now, she has practically become a wholesale dealer, as most of her orders come from outside of Zabern, and she has found it necessary to establish a branch shop in neighboring Alsace-Lorraine towns.

Wireless Is to Be Used in Exploring Center of Earth

BERLIN, July 4.—The latest wireless marvel is the employment of the Hertzian waves for the detection of ores, water and other substances in the bowels of the earth.

Drs. Leimbach and Loewy of the University of Goettingen announced today they have invented a wireless system for the exploration of the structure of the earth and the detection of subterranean springs and ore deposits without boring.

Practical success has just been achieved in the province of Hamburg. An expedition under the auspices of the German colonial office is now at work locating water supplies and ore deposits in Southwest Africa. A second expedition, it is announced, will be fitted out for the experiment in the United States as soon as possible.

Dr. Leimbach said: "Since 1910 Dr. Loewy and myself have been working on a scheme to explore the interior of the earth by means of electric waves. Our efforts have been supported by a specially formed 'Society for the Exploration of the Structure of the Earth' at Goettingen, which took upon itself the task of testing the various processes. After a few months' work we have already been able by the introduction of improvements to determine with certainty the danger of floods in salt mines.

"This year we began experiments at mines where the freezing or cementing system is used to prevent the danger of flooding in the shafts. We found that the electric waves effectively served the purpose of revealing flaws in the frozen or cemented protective walls."

GERMAN WAITERS TO PUT BAN ON EVENING DRESS

BERLIN, July 4.—German waiters have decided to put a ban on their uniform of evening dress.

They contend that most of their figures are not good enough for such attire, and that they look ridiculous. They also declare that people in restaurants generally make a laughing stock of the waiters in evening dress.

The waiters are determined to endure this no longer and they have decided to replace their dress suits by dark lounge suits.

Should the restaurant owners refuse to allow the change the waiters have decided to strike for freedom of dress.

Constance Collier is to appear in a new play by Anthony Hope. Her husband, Julian L'Estrange, is interested in the production.

ALL THE PASSPORT HE NEEDED WAS A MENU

ROME, July 4.—A journalist who wanted to go from Cattaro, in Austria, to Montenegro recently, but had no passport, solved the difficulty in an amusing fashion.

At a hotel where he was lunching he explained his difficulty to the head waiter. The latter picked up the hotel menu and said: "This is the only passport you will need. Every time you are asked to produce it just hand the official a packet of tobacco."

Armed with his menu-passport, the journalist did as he had been advised. The Montenegrin customs officers gravely went through the menu, glancing at the traveler from time to time to see if the "description" tallied, and then with a bow restored the document and told him to proceed. The first dishes on the hotel menu were: "Calf's head; pigs knuckles, shoulder of mutton."

Prussian Court Snubs the Morganatic Bride-to-Be of Young Prince Oscar

BERLIN, July 4.—Prince Oscar of Prussia, the kaiser's fifth son, and his bride-to-be, Countess Ina von Bassawitz, who is a lady in waiting to the empress, are now experiencing some of the hardships which a morganatic marriage entails at the Prussian court, despite the good will of leading members of the imperial family towards the young countess.

Negotiations are now proceeding between the ministry of the royal household and Count Bassawitz-Leweitzow, the bride's father, for a settlement of the countess' position.

Countless intrigues against the countess have already begun in minor court circles, where the fact that a simple Prussian countess should love and be loved by an imperial prince is not easily forgiven.

A proposal had been made on behalf of the ministry of the royal household that Countess Ina should pledge herself solemnly to keep away from all official court functions in order to avoid any unpleasantness being caused by her somewhat exceptional position at court.

It is doubtful whether Count Bassawitz-Leweitzow will accept such humiliating terms, especially as the old Prussian nobleman has always shown himself lukewarm in the matter of the projected marriage.

No decision, however, has yet been reached. The negotiations are expected to last some weeks.

The question of precedence, always a very delicate one, has been solved in this way: Countess Ina ranks at court immediately after the imperial and royal highnesses, and before the empress' mistress of ceremonies.

The date of marriage has not yet been settled, as it depends on the present negotiations.

PRINCE FREDERICK CARL STAR GERMAN ATHLETE

CAUSE FOR DECLINE IN BIRTH RATE ATTRIBUTED TO ECONOMIC CONDITIONS; ARMY RECRUITS CONTINUE TO SWELL THE LISTS

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, July 4.—The darling of the German athletic world at the moment is Prince Frederick Carl of Prussia, a cousin of the kaiser, and nephew of the Duchess of Connaught. He had just won the "Modern Pentathlon," organized by the German Olympic game committee for officers of the army. The event consisted of competitions in pistol shooting, fencing with the epee, swimming, riding and cross-country running.

Prince Frederick Carl, who is 21 years old, captured each event handsomely, eliminating 180 rivals. He crossed the tape in the 1,500-meter run in almost record time, to be enthusiastically greeted by his mother, Princess Frederick Leopold.

Prince Frederick Carl is an expert tennis player, motorist and amateur boxer. He is active in training for the German Olympic team in 1916, and his vigorous example is undoubtedly of wide influence on the somewhat sluggish athletic spirit of German youth.

Reason for Birthrate Decline.

The commission appointed by the ministry for the interior to inquire into the causes of the striking decline of the birthrate in Germany has arrived at the conclusion that there is no deterioration in the physique of the nation. The decline in the birthrate is attributed to economic reasons, and, to some extent, to the circumstance that there exists a growing disinclination to marriage.

It is pointed out in the article that the recruiting lists for the army prove that the German people are not becoming degenerate. For years past the physical qualifications that must be fulfilled before a youth is accepted for service in the active army have been augmented and nevertheless the physical conditions of the youths presenting themselves every six months continue to show improvement.

It has also been ascertained that the decline in the birthrate is most marked among the classes of the population whose financial position enables them to bring up and educate children with ease. The commission draws attention to the fact that the birthrate has been declining universally for the past 20 years, and that the decline has not been so noticeable in Germany as in the Romance countries.

Can't Control Situation.

It is also contended that the decline cannot be stemmed by legislation and that there is, as a matter of fact, no need for legislation in Germany, where the rising generation is of such excellent caliber. The nation, it is argued, depends not on the numbers but on the inner strength of its population.

Every endeavor is being made in Germany by encouraging the youth of both sexes to take more outdoor exercise, and by study and the adoption of hygienic principles, to strengthen the stamina of the race. It is furthermore pointed out in the article that a nation which can supply 38,000 young men, in all respects physically competent and capable, for whom there is no room in the army, when even so largely increased as it has been this year, cannot be described as effete. There is certainly evidence on every hand that the youth of Germany is applying itself with obvious delight to outdoor exercise.

This tendency has also developed in the army. Hitherto, sport among officers has been mainly restricted to riding, while the men have been kept to exercise in gymnasia attached to the barracks. Football in barrack yards is not now unusual.

Feminism Causes Women to Lose Physical Beauty

PARIS, July 4.—"Feminism is causing women to deteriorate," declared the well-known dermatologist, Dr. Louis Bouchet today.

"The exaggerated effort and particularly the intellectual effort they are making toward their emancipation," he said, "is weakening them physically.

"During the 30 years that I have been in practice I have witnessed a gradual alteration in the physical characteristics of the young women who come to consult me. The figure has become deformed, the shoulders have taken on a stoop, the chest has become hollowed, more often than formerly the face is either wan or unhealthily puffy.

"Women should be more moderate in their work. They should never economize on their hours of sleep. They should do rational gymnastic exercises every morning and afterward walk for an hour or two in the open air. They should regulate their diet on hygienic principles."

According to Dr. Bouchet, married women who are mothers have a greater chance of retaining beauty than their unmarried sisters.

The Pile Driver of the DIAMOND

BY BILLY MURPHY.

Sam Crawford hits them harder than anybody in the game. There is no doubt whatever of that. He has played some fifteen years in the Big Leagues and participated in over 1,500 games.

This is his seventeenth season in baseball his fifteenth season in the Big Show and out of the seventeen years he has served to date he has established a mark above .300 on no less than twelve occasions. And when the Tigers started their early drive to the front in budding May, Crawford was the main factor in the uplift, with a mark above .420, leading his circuit a dozen leagues in extra-base wallops.

Not forgetting to mention that Crawford crashes into a baseball harder than any rival in the game—not barring Frank Baker, Joe Jackson, Hans Wagner, Cactus Cravath, Sherwood Magee, Ty Cobb, or Tris Speaker.

On top of all this we reserve for the last the most eminent boost of all in these latter days of fragile talent—in the last ten years Crawford has stood to the guns in 1,500 battles an average of 150 games a season—or less than half a week's absence from April to October. Which, after all, is the crowning test of value to a club.

Meredith Davis paid Crawford a pretty compliment the other day when he wrote:

"Crawford never saw a professional game of ball until he played in one himself, evidently believing the best way to enjoy the diamond sport was to mix in the swim himself. And ever since then Sam has been doing quite a considerable amount of mixing, speaking by and large, during the several times a day he takes a swing at the ball.

Of course Sam had fooled around with a couple of semi-pro teams in his native Canada before taking things seriously. This gave him a suspicion that if he could cross the border he might show up some of those Yankee guys who have a habit of making loud noises along about the Fourth day of July by way of gloating over their forefather's victory in the world series with Sam's mother country. Sam was a true Briton, a loyal son of the tight little isle, though born some distance from the maternal roof of Lunnon town.

If Sam had been like some other ball players we have seen and heard he might never have been able to get down from Canada into the United States without having paid tariff duties. You see, Sam inquisitated when the tariff on lumber was a right sizeable item of expense, but the customs inspector failed to discover any dutiable goods of a mahogany nature when he asked Sam to take off his hat a moment. So in came the future fence tickler.

The big league career of Sam has been chiefly confined to his labors for the Detroit club, said labors consisting of collecting a matter of anywhere around .300 and upward as a batting average, year in and year out. Considering the fact that Sam has been staring at such dazzling mound stars as Ed Walsh, Rube Waddell, Jack Coombs, Walter Johnson, Plank, Bender, Joe Wood, Chesbro, Falkenberg, Ford, Quinn and others at various and frequent stages of his waking moments, he needn't be blamed if he does a little pointing with pride once in a while when the averages are published.

Sam's leap from obscurity on a Canadian backwoods team to the front rank of United States artillery regulars has gone down in athletic achievements as one of the greatest long-distance jumps on record. For the last seven years, however, Sam has been obliged to play a sort of duet with Ty Cobb, but even the Georgian's frequent solo work hasn't dulled the resonant tones of Wahoo Sam's wagon tongue smashing the pill where A. Spalding planted his label.

And now they say Sam Crawford, the old guard, is sinking into the twilight of his baseball life; that he is in the evening of his career. But we rise to remark, after scanning this season's record, that it's going to be a tolerably long evening for Sam—in fact, we rather think he's bent on making a night of it.

Strange, but True.

An Eastern scribe says: The Washington team's success depends wholly upon the work of five men, Johnson, Gandil, Foster, Milan and Henry, without whom Griff would be wallowing in the second division mire.

For that matter, where would the Giants be without Matty Meyers, Doyle, Demaree and Murray? Also what would become of the Athletics if Baker, Collins, Bender, Plank and Schang were to drop dead?

SAM CRAWFORD of the Detroit Tigers.

IF THERE'S ANYTHING IN A NAME NEWEST NAP SHOULD BE A WONDER

Joe Birmingham's newest Cleveland player should be a wonder.

He is a cousin of Ty Cobb and his first name is Rucker.

The new Nap is Rucker Ginn, captain, left fielder and heavy hitter of the University of Georgia team.

Ginn is said to possess a good deal of his cousin's speed. Like Cobb, he bats left-handed.

It's a wild guess he was named for Nap Rucker, Brooklyn's star left-hander, who, like Cobb and Ginn, is a product of Georgia.

Ginn has been signed to report to the Naps within two weeks.

AT HIS BEST ON DECORATION DAY

The Decoration Day hitter. That is what the fans around the National League will be calling Gavvy Cravath, the big outfielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, if he keeps up the gait he has set the past few years. If every day was Decoration Day, Cravath would be one of the greatest hitters the world ever produced. Last Decoration Day Cravath was credited with driving out five hits, three of the raps being good for two bases, one for the full distance and one for a single.

In the past five years or since Cravath left the Minneapolis club, he has hit like a demon on every Decoration Day with the exception of 1912. Then used as a pinch hitter, Gavvy failed to deliver. On Decoration Day in 1910 Cravath had four singles and two homers to his credit at the end of the day. In 1911 he had three singles, two doubles and a triple. On Decoration Day in 1913 he had two singles, a double and a home run, while this year he had one single, three doubles and a homer. The former Miller has been one of the longest hitters in the old league since joining the club.

GERMAN TENNIS TEAM HAS QUIT

German tennis enthusiasts were deeply disappointed over the decision of the German Lawn Tennis Union not to send a team to the United States to take part in the Davis cup competitions. It was thought that the Germans with Champion [illegible] on the team, might have stood an excellent chance of winning the trophy again the [illegible] English and Australians, as he is in specially good form this summer.

The German participation in the American competitions seems to have been knocked by the declination of the Messrs. Kirinschroth brothers and Hahl to go to the United States.

YANKEE ATHLETES TO INVADE ENGLAND

Nearly a dozen American athletes who have received international permits from the Amateur Athletic Union to compete in the British field and track championships at Stamford Bridge ground, London, will sail within a few days.

Homer Baker, James Wadell, Thomas Kelly and Harry J. Smith will sail for Southampton Friday.

T. J. Halpin and J. A. Powers of Boston A. A., W. F. Potter of Yale and James C. Patterson of Pennsylvania are [illegible]ther American amateaurs who have received permits.

Hannes Kohlemainen, Finnish runner, recently sailed for his home and may not compete in the July 4th events. If he does enter he will run with the Irish-American athletes.

ANOTHER STORY ON RUBE WADDELL

Every story told on George Edward Waddell isn't true. Like the lamented L. Vonder Ahe, Bugs Raymond and others, Rube has been loaded with gems rich and rare. Eddie didn't kick on being thus honored, however. When starring in "The Stain of Guilt," Waddell's press agent dug up the files of long ago and made G. Eddie the hero of many escapades, much to the delight of Plano's boy.

There's one the press agent didn't evolve, however. It's been told on Waddell by gentlemen of veracity. Back in the days when the Corsairs roamed on Shoofly Island, George Edward had a habit of loafing around the club office, sticking up officials for comps, a la Lew Ritter, the pass hunter par excellence. One afternoon while the rush through the gates was on, Waddell chanced to be in the office. The phone bell sounded. Next to a fire alarm there is nothing Rube admired more than a phone call. He raced to the receiver, yanked it from its perch with a loud "Hello. What's the matter?" Waddell listened to a mortal at the other end of the line and then glanced into a corner of the room. "Wait a minute," yelled George Edward into the transmitter. With a bound he darted to that corner, grabbed up an old umbrella and rushing over to the phone, held it in front of the mouth piece and roared, "Is this yours?"

Did You Ever Notice That

George Burns, the Giants' speedy left fielder, wears two different caps when playing in the outfield. Left field at the Polo Grounds is one of the worst sun fields in any of the major league circuits. For this reason when the sun is shining Burns wears the long-peaked cap with blue sun glasses attached to the visor, modeled in 1910 by "Fred" Clarke, manager of the Pittsburg Pirates, and when it isn't he wears a cap with a much shorter visor. He wears the latter headgear when he goes to bat.

Were Dogs.

He—Darling, refuse me, and I shall never love another girl.

She (briskly)—What I want is a man who will promise me that if I accept him. Judge.

DOES ATHLETICS AFFECT THE HEART?

Since the rejection of Hannes Kolehmainen by a Brooklyn fraternal organization because of a weak heart, many have inquired whether or not all athletes are affected with that malady. Secretary James E. Sullivan of the A. A. U. comes to the front with the proofs that a great number of champion cinderpath artists of years ago are still living, thriving, hale and hearty, and almost ready to continue where they left off. Mr. Sullivan wants it understood, however that he does not dissent with the analysis of competent physicians, but nevertheless he is of the opinion that active participation in athletics does more to keep a man in good health and make useful citizens of the growing boys than almost anything else you can think of.

Rummaging through the A. A. U. and intercollegiate almanacs we find the names of many American titleholders, actively engaged in business, that showed the class some thirty-odd years ago.

Mr. Sullivan was anxious to know why it is that "enlarged or athletic hearts" affect some athletes and pass up a great majority. He admitted that on and off there have been statements made by doctors in relation to the shortening of an athlete's life because of the "terrible" strain on their hearts.

"This matter should be handled with kid gloves," declared Mr. Sullivan. "I do not want to be put in a position of disagreeing with doctors, because they know their business by [illegible]. Yet, I am frank to say that in [illegible] cases the physicians are all wrong. Going back thirty years ago, we find a list of many names of real athletes who have refused to bow to Father Time. Nearly every day I run into one or two of them, and if a handshake and a smile on the face are any criterion of good health, then they certainly are blessed with it."

For one we will present Everett Janson Wendell, who cut some capers at Harvard twenty-five odd years ago. He belongs to a family of athletes. To me Mr. Wendell timing and officiating at intercollegiate championships is a treat in itself. He is a member of several important A. A. U. committees and rushes to Europe now and then in the capacity of one of Uncle Sam's delegates to international meetings for Olympic games. He is only one of a great army of perfect manhood that athletics brought out. When he was a student at Cambridge Mr. Wendell performed in startling form and competed as often as he could.

Harry Buermeyer is the oldest living champion. In the sixties Mr. Buermeyer held the upper hand, just like Kolehmainen, John Paul Jones, Howard Drew and some others blaze before the public right now. He is about 70 years old, but you wouldn't think so to see him roaming around the New York A. C., taking in the boxing bouts and telling stories of the days when he was kingpin.

And the walkers: Pete Hogelman, J. Ennis, Weston, O'Leary, Billy Purdy, Harry Armstrong, Dan Lehane and E. C. Hoiske. Thirty years ago these peds used to walk on six-day schedule. And they are with us today good and healthy.

And there are many others still kicking.

Ale Go Ata Valley.

A slim chicken, who was so thin that she nicked the counter where she leaned against it, trickled up to the hosiery department of a Sixteenth street store and said:

"Say, can you give me a pair of hose that don't bag at the knees?"

Mame shifted her chicle against her back molars, oozed a wise slant over the customer and replied listlessly:

"Not unless yuh take garden hose!"—Judge.

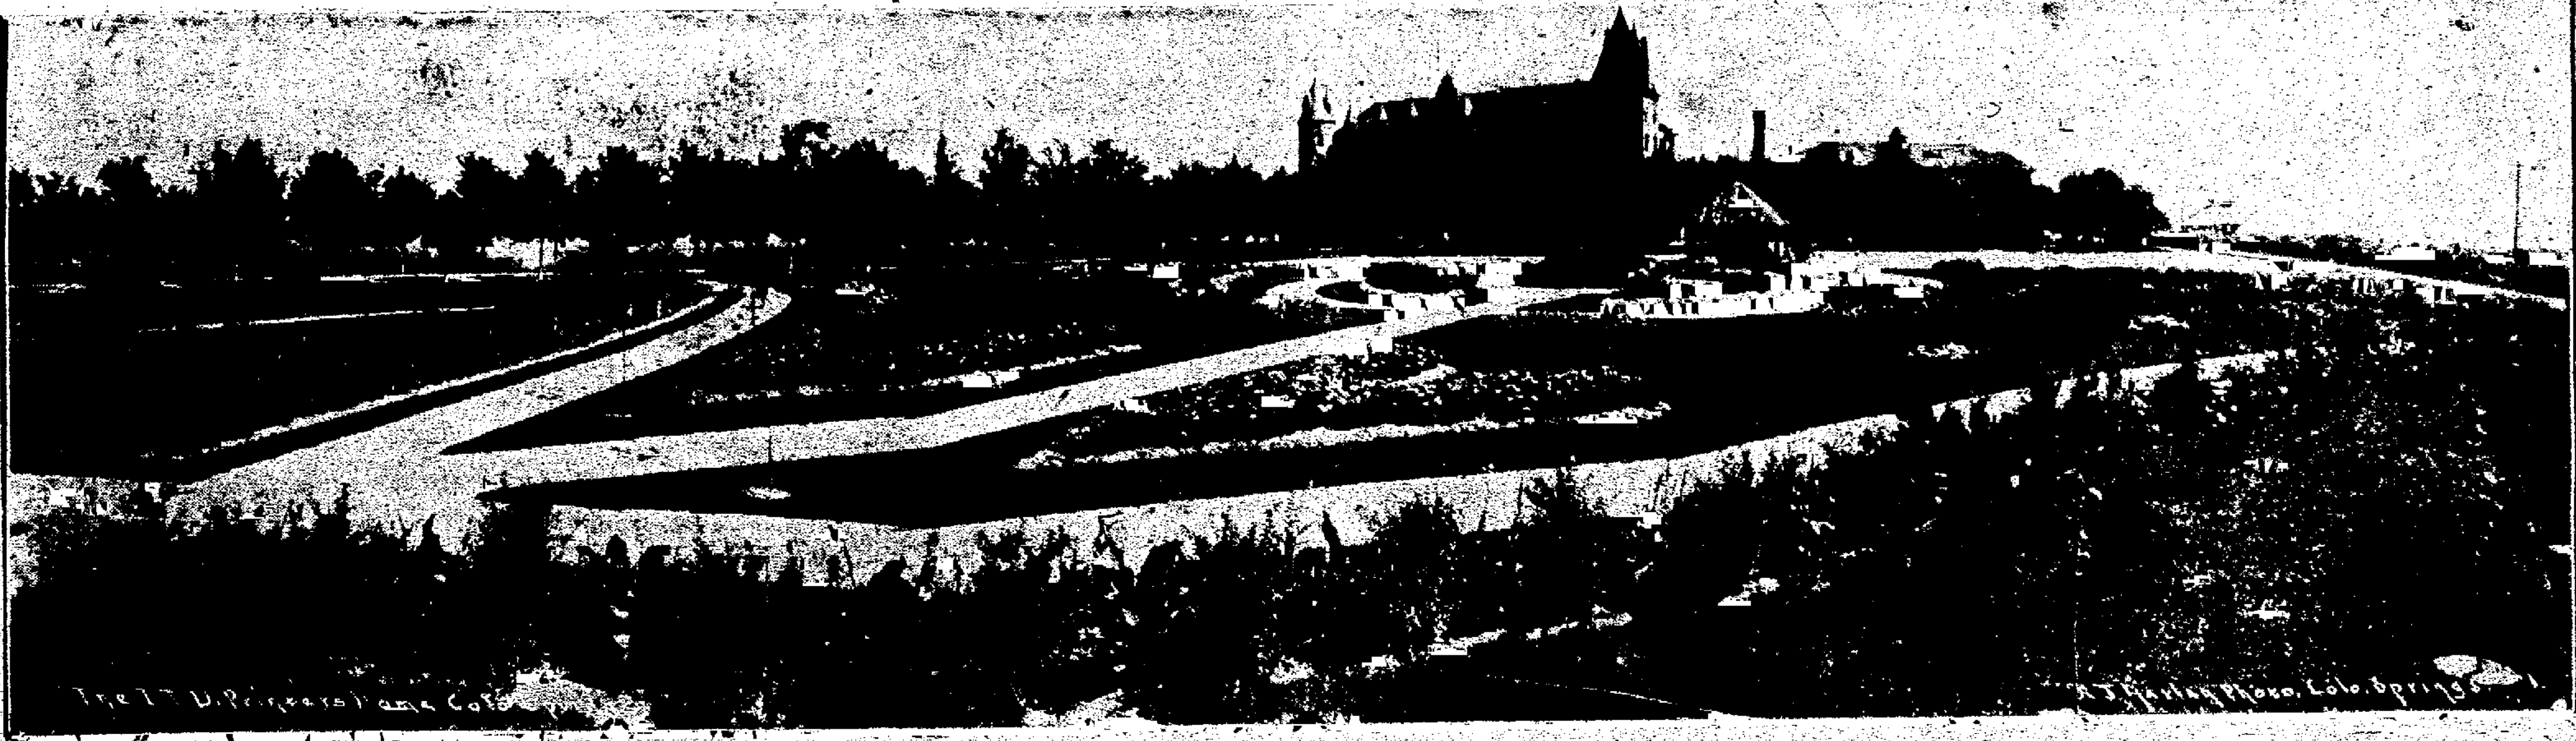

Dear to Life.

Our old friend, Paddy Dorrell of Milwaukee has broken loose again, or, in other words, Paddy has unearthed the old green sweater and has started his "Come Back" campaign. Paddy has been negligent in his road work here of late due to his not having any champions on the string, but then he was out for an airing last night, and when he passed us he informed us that he had it on us when it came to running. Well, when we last seen Paddy he had finished running and was taking things easy walking up a hill. After Paddy had passed some of the folks on Cedar street asked us if that fellow was buggy. Evidently they have forgotten the green sweater. It has been so long since the King has been on the road.

A HALF MILLION TO BEAT LIPTON

Crews Are Being Picked for the Great Race in September

When American and English Yachtsmen Will Contest

A half million dollars or more is being spent this summer just for a yacht fast enough to beat Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV.

The big race between the fastest English boat and the fastest American craft will be run next September 10 off Sandy Hook. Sir Thomas Lipton is a jolly good sport. He makes his money in the tea business and spends it trying to beat America at yacht racing.

The reason so much money is to be spent to beat Lipton is because so many begged for a chance at the champion of the British Isles. Several different clubs offered to finance different boats to contest with Lipton.

Sir Thomas Lipton's vessel, the Shamrock IV, was launched May 26, Queen's birthday. She has a length of waterline of 75 feet. Her overall length is 119 feet. Her beam is 23 feet. Her draught is 13 feet 9 inches. The height of the main mast is 160 feet. The bowsprit is 10 feet outboard. The lofty sails are narrow. There are three masts, one of steel and two of wood.

Lipton in sending the challenge, specified the American boat should be not more than 75 feet at the water line.

Length of a vessel is an important item in racing. The various features decide the ease with which a craft is handled in the water and the speed it will attain.

As soon as Lipton sent his challenge the acceptances were ready. Alexander Smith Cochran, a carpet dealing millionaire, offered to build a yacht. Another syndicate from Boston, Philadelphia and New York, composed of George M. Pynchon, J. B. Ford and E. Trowbridge Hall of New York; F. C. Fletcher, E. S. Webster, Elliott Wadsworth, Charles Hayden, F. E. Peabody, J. C. Cobb, Oliver Ames and Henry Taggart of Boston; E. W. Clark of Philadelphia, with George D. Barron of Rye, N. Y., and George Lauder, Jr. of Greenwich, Conn., offered a yacht.

Another yacht was offered by flag officers of the New York Club consisting of J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker, Jr., Cornelius Vanderbilt, Henry Walters, Frederick G. Bourne and Arthur C. James.

The syndicate headed by Pynchon named their yacht the Defiance. The flag officers named their ship the Resolute. Cochran named his craft the Vanitie.

Reliance was the most extreme yacht built under the old rule, and this, on a water-line length of just 90 feet, was over 140 feet in length on deck, and spread the enormous sail area of over 16,000 square feet of canvas. Such racing yachts lost their usefulness as soon as the cup contests were over. The new rule produces a more reasonable boat.

PUBLICITY ATTENDS BUILDING OF YACHTS.

In the other days absolute secrecy attended the building of yachts. While considerable secrecy attended the building of the yachts this year the measurements have all been given out.

Had only one yacht been made this year the cost would have been much less. But the different yachting clubs insisted in putting out their boats according to their own ideas. The more sail does not necessarily mean the fastest boat. Different sails work differently in different winds. Too much sail makes the boat more likely to capsize.

The Resolute has 8,188 square feet of sail. The Vanitie has 9,465 square feet. The Defiance has 9,820 square feet. All these have much less sail than the old Reliance.

The sailors who will man these boats are keen for the races. They care nothing for the pay. What they want is a share of the big prize money if they keep the cup nailed down. But the pay is greater than to the average sailor.

To every man jack goes $40 a month, with $5 a month extra at the end of the season for conduct money. The quartermasters get $50 each. The second mate gets $1,200 for the season, the first mate $1,500 and the sailing master from $2,000 up.

Now, out of this crew three special men are picked—one to shin the mast in case of trouble; one to climb out on the bowsprit and one to keep the lazarette, where the extra sails of sail are stored. These take down an extra $5 monthly. Whenever a boat starts everybody receives an extra $2.50. Any race won nets everybody $5 more. Oh, yes, the crew of a winning cup defender can salt away a pretty little piece of money—if they save!

The three crews went on the payroll on April 1. There they stay for six months. All hands are helping with the boats as well, cleaning, fixing gear, tuning up. Some have looked over the sails, others have polished the underbody.

And all this time they have been living high. Each yacht has a tender and attendant launches. On the tender the crew eats and sleeps. The steamer City of Stamford, altered at a cost of $10,000, is a floating house for Vanitie. Defiance has the Irolita, Commodore Clark's schooner; the Cape Cod is Resolute's mother ship.

Every man jack has been sailing ships all his life. Their organization is all complete when they join. The first mate has his place forward, directing the crew and tending the head sails; the second mate is amidships, usually in charge of the hauling of backstays and runners. The quartermasters boss the different gangs under the supervision of the master. On the quarterdeck is the force of sailing amateurs and the managing owner. The latter may or may not actually sail his craft. He has two or three amateur assistants, who are supposed to do the necessary chart work and keep the log of each race. They pick out on the chart the position of the defender, practically on every tack. They must be prepared to give her location to the helmsman whenever it is necessary. Sometimes, not often, they are asked for advice.

Not all of the men who put up the money can sail in a race. They must be public spirited enough to stay away and watch their pride do her work from some more distant point of vantage than the quarterdeck. All that is asked of them is to put up their money regularly and unstintingly.

And not all the money goes for the boat, either. A pretty penny is needed for daily expenses. Yachting crews can eat a deal of provender. And they must be clothed. Every sailor man gets four white canvas working suits to begin with. He must have oilskins and rubber boots and tan leather, rubber-soled deck shoes. Likewise his kit must contain a blue jersey and a pair of blue trousers, also a man o' war shirt.

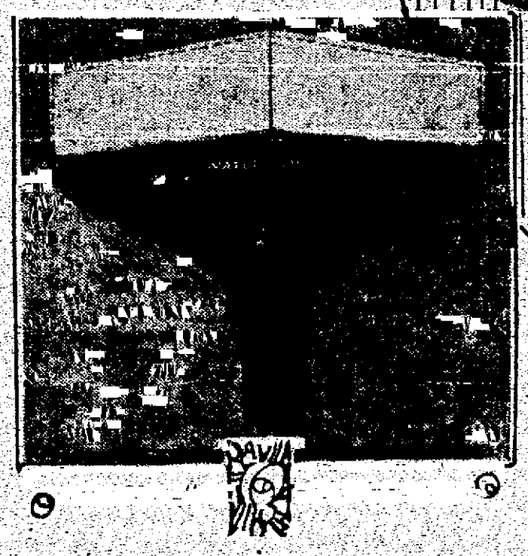

And now we have the boats safely launched and in the water, each in charge of her picked crew. What next? Ah, the tuning up. And that's the job that lasts until the morning of the race. Resolute and Defiance and Vanitie have each a tough, gruelling summer's work cut out for them.

First, all three will be taken to the New York end of the Sound. Then come ten days of racing—mere trials, not at all decisive. On June 2 followed the regatta of the New York Yacht Club, under whose flag all three boats sailed. After that they race around the circuit, meaning that they take part in all the chief regattas of the principal yacht clubs, to get further tuning. On July 5 all three will be summoned to Newport, where the real work begins.

Day after day they will race each other there, pausing for breath, to make changes in rigging or gear as the owners see fit. Then in the latter part of August the real elimination races take place—as many as the committee appointed by the New York Yacht Club sees fit.

And then, on September 10, off Sandy Hook, the first race with Shamrock IV, and the best three out of five.

The Last Straw.

"Will you take a couple of tickets for the tradesmen's dance, Mickins?" inquired the local bootmaker.

"Tickets?" snorted Mickins. "I can't afford tacks, let alone tickets, with trade in this condition."

"Things as bad as all that?" came the sympathetic inquiry.

"'Tisn't the trade, but the people as worries me. Look at this pair of trousers, now. This is the fifth time I've had 'em in to press, and they're not even paid for."

"Bit off, I'll admit," said the vendor of boots, "but you need not grumble. What about me? Yesterday I went to collect a bill for a pair of boots and the wretch kicked me out with them!"

INSURING MINE DISASTERS

Because of the frightful disaster in a coal mine at Eccles, W. Va., the State workmen's compensation fund which started business last October finds itself staggering under the necessity of paying a large sum to widows and orphans of the 180 victims. The scheme under which the State is operating contemplates the division of industries into twenty-three separate groups which are assessed according to the seriousness of the hazards involved. The employers pay 90 per cent while the employes pay 10 per cent of these assessments.

When the plan was originated no provision was made for a catastrophe of such proportions as that at Eccles. The money is paid into a general fund and the losses are settled as they occur. Now the Public Service Commission proposes to ask the legislature to authorize it to tax each industry separately in case of similar disasters. This proposition appears fair on its face, but there are objections.

Washington has a State assessment scheme for the settlement of workmen's compensation losses, and each industry in the State not only pays its assessment separately, but also pays for its own losses. The scheme out there had not been in force very long before there was an explosion in a powder mill at Chehalis, which killed a number of girls and made the payment of between $30,000 and $40,000 imperative. Powder mills in Washington were assessed at 10 per cent of their payrolls.

It happened, however, that there were only three powder-making concerns in the State, two of them, including the one which had the explosion, were of small means, and the other was a great interstate concern which refused to submit to the compensation idea. In consequence there was only about $250 in the fund for the victims of powder mill accidents, and the only concern capable of paying an extra catastrophe assessment went into the United States courts to test the constitutionality of the law.

It would be better if the West Virginia commission would cause the amendment of its law so that a catastrophe fund can be created through an independent assessment on all its industries, or that it make arrangements as it now has the power to do under the law to reinsure its catastrophe hazard with some foreign concern like Lloyds' of London, if the underwriters there will accept the risk.

"You may cackle, my son," said Smithy, "about our big fleet, our efficient army, and our wonderful resources, but you must, in spite of our so-called flying corps, admit we are miles behind in the airship biz. France and Germany are all before us in the flying game."

"Quite right; they should be," replied Private Brown. "I've never known America to fly before a foreign power yet!"

WOMEN CIGARETTE SMOKERS

London, so far, has not followed the example of Chicago, in opening a clinic for the treatment of the thousands of girls and women who desire to be cured of the cigarette habit. But the cigarette habit, none the less, is apparently becoming a confirmed one among women in England.

The manager of a leading firm of cigarette makers in Piccadilly confessed that he had a large and increasing number of women clients on his books.

"Women smoke as a matter of course now," he said, "and it is the fashion for them to have their cigarettes especially made for them. Turkish tobacco has held the field until lately, but fashion is tending toward coarser cut Russian tobacco made into cigarettes with maize paper, which slows down the combustion.

"Women are more luxurious smokers than men. They are now going in for most elaborate holders of amber and ivory, inlaid with gold, or studded with diamonds and other jewels. And, of course, they have their gold and silver cigarette cases specially made to hold the particular size of cigarette they smoke, and charming little jeweled match boxes.

"Physicians have something to do with the growth of smoking among women. In prescribing for nervous women they often include one or two cigarettes a day as part of the treatment, and so the habit starts until you find a woman smoking half a dozen cigarettes with her coffee after lunch."

Several London hotel managers unanimously agreed that for a woman not to smoke in the restaurant after lunch and dinner was now the exception, and that smoking with afternoon tea was not unusual.

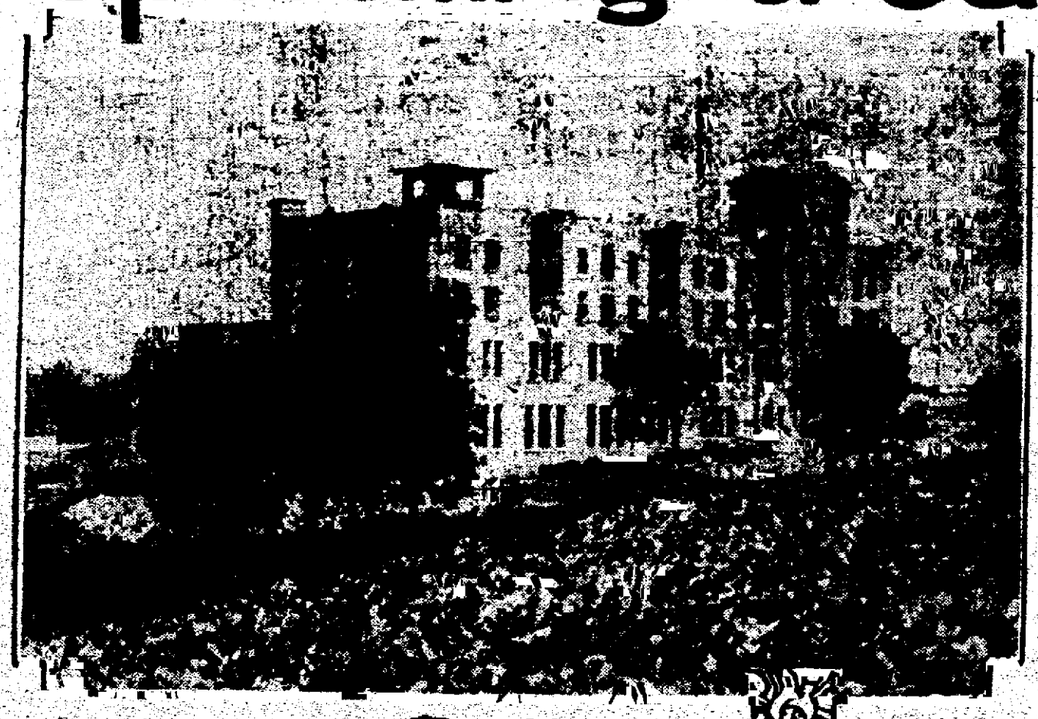

"The old social traditions and laws of etiquette are dying out. On the continent women have smoked for years, and it is from them that the women of this country have caught the habit. In Germany women have now started smoking light cigars, but I cannot believe their example will be followed here."

POOR MAN SPEAKETH.

They often speak of women thus:
"They cannot, thro' em, attend."
But, then,
The looks the charmers cast at us!
And, oh, the marks they make of men!

Municipal Farm, Where Prisoners Work at Raising Cabbages and Other Vegetables, Takes Place of Old Fashioned Lockup

A shabby looking prisoner faced the Police Judge one day in the Police Court at Kansas City. All prisoners look shabby after spending the night in the police headquarters, so the shabbiness of this man was no exception. His eyes were different, however.

Yet he had been convicted of stealing.

"I guess we had better send this man over to the county for the Prosecutor to handle," the Judge said, in a whisper to the Prosecuting Attorney. But as he whispered a slender boyish fellow seated back of the Judge leaned forward and whispered, "No, send him to the works. I think we can make something out of him. I have just been noticing his eyes. He's different. You know he was drunk when he stole."

The slender man was the representative of the Board of Public Welfare, which often takes the part of prisoners in court or looks after their welfare after they are sent to the Workhouse.

The Judge turned to the prisoner. "Why don't you quit drinking?" demanded the Judge.

"Can't," said the prisoner.

"Year in the Workhouse," said the Judge, and turning to the Board of Welfare man, said, "Hope you reform him."

The Board of Welfare man saw to it that the prisoner was sent to the Municipal Farm. Instead of being herded in the ordinary type of workhouse he was put in the open air. There he worked the alcohol out of his system and later returned to the city where he had disgraced himself and got a job as bookkeeper and has since been a sober and industrious citizen.

The Kansas City Municipal Farm was established four years ago on a patch of ground that couldn't even raise dust, for the rocks. The idea at first was merely an elaboration of the rock pile idea, with country atmosphere, the intention being to work booze-soaked systems clean, and giving them a chance to look the world in the face again through normal eyes.

The "farm" became an asset to the good roads cause, with the result that a considerable part of the parch became valueless as a quarry. By the same token it gained value as land, inasmuch as it would grow something besides rock roads in their more elemental form. Eventually, the seed of good intention planted by the instigators of the farm idea, grew up to be onions, some of them. Others took the shape of potatoes and cabbages, parsnips, turnips, carrots and whatnot, of the garden variety.

The beginning of the varied labor programme grew out of the necessity of employing that land that no longer gave forth food for the stone crusher. It resulted in the raising of sufficient garden stuff during the summer to feed all the prisoners during the first garden season. The next season, the crop of potatoes was nearly enough to last through to the next, or present, garden season. This year's potato crop will last the farm through to next season, even if the farm is taxed to capacity this winter. The same is true of the onions and of other vegetables that can be stored away for the winter.

When the city took over the farm its one improvement was an old frame house, the very appearance of which raised the question as to whether it could be classed as an improvement. However, it was made to accommodate the earlier meager endeavors of the city. All city prisoners were not then sent to the farm. Only those whom the farm could accommodate were sent, and those were selected because of their necessity of getting the booze or drugs worked out of their systems.

DRUGS AND HISSY SMUGGLED IN.

And, as a booze or drug cure, it must be said it was a failure. Poor housing conditions and the faults of the earlier organization of the farm left wide open the opportunity of smuggling whisky and heroin tablets to the prisoners. A quite remarkable example of the ingenuity to which credit business can attain, was given in the way bootleggers of hard whisky and drugs bartered their wares among the prisoners, by the space of the prisoner's waistband, or their luck in being assigned at the time he arrived. There was room to believe the system involved further than to the outside doors of the farm prison, and employes were dropped from time to time.

With the growth of the farm idea it became necessary to provide more commodious quarters for the prisoners and a three-story reinforced concrete building was erected, prison labor being used exclusively, except to superintend the job. It was at that time the office of superintendent of construction was created, an office, it has been found, impossible to abolish. The new building was designed to be used temporarily as a dormitory for the prisoners, but to be taken over to the usage of a barn after still another building—the administration building—should have been completed.

With the completion of the new building a more elaborate programme was worked out and put into practice. And with its use the success of the farm pointed more clearly to the fact that its founders were on the right track, even though the idea had outgrown their initial plans.

The new programme included a tailor shop, a shoe shop, a planing mill and wood working shop, a blacksmith shop, laundry, etc.

The tailor shop was set to making all uniforms needed on the farm and repairing the clothing of prisoners who were "dressed in" in the farm uniforms. All shoes used on the farm were made in the shoe shop. The laundry did all laundry work for the farm. Horses were kept shod and implements and wagons in repair by the blacksmith shop, and in the construction work and repairing about the farm, the wood working shop and planing mill has been kept busy.

Last year the new administration building was built a four-story reinforced concrete building with no labor other than that of the prisoners working under the construction foreman. The appropriation for the building would not cover the complete building called for in the plans, so only one-half of it was built. However, the possible vagary of a change of administration to discourage the completion of the building and make the institution suffer from a programme of "retrenchment" was provided against by building the basement of the entire building as called for in the complete plans.

There are no "guards" on the Kansas City farm. They are foremen. Neither is there a warden in charge. He is the superintendent.

One of the later innovations has been to deprive the prisoners of tobacco. That action was brought about through the necessity of retrenchment. The farm is under the sole supervision of the Board of Public Welfare, which body also has control of the parole system of the city courts. An investigator for the board is present in each of the city courts each morning and is consulted by the Police Judges as to the advisability of treatment for each prisoner. All city prisoners now are sent to the farm in default of payment of their fines. A prisoner whose weakness is in whisky or in a drug is fined purposely so heavy that his fine will be defaulted for the purpose of getting him under the beneficent influence of the farm programme, where a liquor cure and a drug cure have been installed in addition to a modernly equipped hospital for the treatment of other diseases common among police court characters.

BATH GIVEN AT ENTRANCE.

Each afternoon the farm motor truck takes the day's installment of prisoners to the farm. They are "dressed in" with a bath and farm clothing throughout provided them. Their own clothing is sent to the laundry where it is disinfected and thoroughly cleaned and pressed. Their shoes go to the shoe shop where they are mended, new soles put on where needed and put in the best possible condition. The clothing goes from the laundry to the tailor shop where it is mended. It is then assembled and placed in a locker and kept, completely listed, with the prisoner's signature to the list, until he is released, when he goes back to the world clean, inside and out, so far as it is possible to regenerate him in the time of his sentence. Incidentally, a system of longer sentences has been purposely imposed that the beneficent influence of the farm may have a chance to work lasting effect on the prisoners.

All prisoners receiving fines of $25 or more are weighed in and a table of their weight is kept throughout their sentence. And in these tables is shown most convincingly the effect of the farm programme. Records show remarkable gains in weight, as high as ten pounds a month.

Every prisoner is put on at 100 in the merit system in use. Each is given a small red tag, which he keeps tied in a buttonhole of his coat or shirt.

Certain violations of rules count off so many points, and at a certain point the tag is taken away from the prisoner until he shall have redeemed himself by good behavior. Those prisoners who wear the tags appear as proud of them as those others are ashamed who are in shackles, the result of an attempt to escape. With an average of 275 prisoners, there is an average of only ten tags hanging on the forfeit board in the farm office.

Friday and Sunday nights, the dining room becomes a chapel and religious services are held. Attendance is not compulsory, but the Sunday night service particularly, is attended by nearly all prisoners. These services are conducted by various religious organizations who provide speakers and music, there being a piano in the chapel. The prisoners join in the religious singing with right good will and, however, sincere or insincere in motive, their lusty response in the singing might be taken as an example in the worship among the free and guiltless.

The Saturday half holiday programme doesn't forget the farm. Saturday is the big day. Petty thieves, dope fiends, drunks, wife beaters, whether of the butcher, baker or candlestick maker variety, or with no classification whatever on other occasions on this one day come under the great American classification of "foo." Every Saturday afternoon during the "season" the Whites play the Blacks, on the farm diamond. And right there is one reason the little red tag is so highly desirable, for the red tag is the ticket of admission to the ball game, as it is also the library card at the farm library, by no means a meager institution, either.

Every department of the farm is conducted on a businesslike programme of system. The foreman in charge of the tailorshop is credited with the work his shop does, at regular shop prices. The same is true of the shoe shop, the blacksmith shop, the laundry, etc. Each foreman makes his daily report, and charged against his gross receipts stand all supplies furnished. Only one department shows in the red in its monthly reports, the grave yard. The farm has to care for the city's potter field, and in that department, everything goes out and nothing comes in that can be counted as an asset.

Any foreman whose daily reports show inefficiency is reported to the civil service board and he suffers reduction in class, with consequent reduction in salary, until he has redeemed himself. If he declines too far, he finds himself declined entirely off the payroll and out of the civil service.

Recently, thirteen acres of land adjoining the farm has been acquired and on that land a farm for women prisoners is to be instituted. The building operations now in progress on the farm include the construction of a tubercular hospital on the peak of a hill, where the air reaches it from all sides at all times. This hospital is being constructed with prison labor.

One of the really paying features of the municipal farm is the stock department, or pig pens. The only cost of fattening the pigs is the hauling of garbage from the city hospital. Quite small Duroc Jersey shoats dispose of the garbage until they become large and uncomfortably fat looking porkers and awaken some morning on the farm's food menu.

The general atmosphere surrounding the farm prisoners is sufficient proof of the correctness of the contention that out of door, productive labor and mental training, will go further toward working reform within a man than the mere locking him up, or shackling him on a rock pile with a knob headed hammer. Prisoners on the Kansas City farm are doing something constructive. They are doing a work worth while, both to themselves and the community, and when they file in to their evening meal after a hearty and hale eight hours at muscle making and mind regenerating in the clean atmosphere of the farm, there is none of the hang dog, "I'll get-even-if-I-hang-for-it attitude about them, but one of buoyant raillery and good natured brotherhood on which all right thinking must be founded.

SUPERINTENDENT REPORTS ON FARM FOR YEAR.

Dr. E. W. Cavaness, superintendent of the municipal farm in his annual report says:

"The past fiscal year has been a busy one with us. We have handled 2,949 men, which is 200 more than has been handled in any previous year, but this increase is due to men being sentenced to the farm for hospital treatments, as this report will show.

"During the year the general health of our men has been unusually good and our activities have been reasonably profitable. The organization of our administration has been perfected to a degree. The establishment of departments, and daily reports from each, has increased the efficiency of our work. Our foremen have become more accustomed to handle men in the open and the prisoners have learned that we are here for one purpose, and that is to help them and teach them to do things.

"The majority of our men are allowed perfect freedom on the farm and from 35 to 50 per cent are worked without foremen. I have practically eliminated the use of guards, and in securing men to handle prisoners we have found it very valuable to get trade men who can teach our men how to do things in a first class manner, so that when the men leave the institution, in many instances, they can follow certain trades.

"The administration has been more successful from a standpoint of discipline than in former years. The number of escapes has been reduced to a minimum for this class of institution. Our trusty force is increased daily and in general the honor system has prevailed for the past year.

"The financial report for the past fiscal year shows a profit of $2,630.36, or a net profit per man per day of 3.3 cents against a loss of $17,539.38, or a net loss per man per day of 23.62 cents for the previous fiscal year.

"This year we have practically finished one-half of our administration building. The excavation, footings and a part of the concrete has been laid on the other half.

"Our boulevard system has been improved and extended. The farm products, especially our hogs, have been profitable.

Canada's Ocean to Ocean Route Nearly Done.

The proposed Lincoln memorial highway, to stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific across the United States, is not the only transcontinental highway in North America. A similar highway across Canada, the plan of which was conceived about a dozen years ago, is now rapidly nearing completion, and will be in use throughout its entire length within two or three years.

The completion of this new motor road will be of interest not only to American motorists as an attractive scenic route, but it will give impetus to the automobile trade of Canada, opening up a big market for American-made cars, and increasing trade opportunities in that line, it is said. The Lincoln highway in the United States will have a similar effect, and the two roads combined will be expected radically to increase popular interest in motoring in both countries.

The Lincoln highway is being laid out so as to pass many points of historic interest east of the Missouri River and the most picturesque mountain scenes west of the Missouri. A similar plan has been followed in laying out the Canadian transcontinental roadway, which, after touching the old and historic points of interest in the provinces of Quebic and Ontario, hurries away to the unsurpassed scenery of the Canadian Rockies.

Twenty-five years ago the plan to build a railroad from Halifax to Vancouver was considered visionary and impracticable. To cross the barren wastes above Lake Superior, the vast prairies of Saskatchewan, and the mountain passes of Alberta and British Columbia, was then considered by some of the best engineers to be impossible. Yet today one great transcontinental railway is under successful operation, a second one is rapidly nearing completion, and a third is under construction.

A few years ago nobody would have thought of motoring through Canada, from ocean to ocean, as among the possibilities of the near future, and yet today automobiles are running almost the entire length of this new Canadian transcontinental highway, and only a few more links are to be made before the chain as a whole is complete.

From Halifax to Sudbury, and from Winnipeg to the Great Divide, the trail is nearly completed, and the more difficult roads through the mountains of British Columbia are rapidly nearing completion.

When the highway is finished the Canadians say it will be one of the longest, most beautiful and most picturesque automobile routes in the world. It will be 3,000 miles long and will cross fertile plains and valleys and great mountain ranges.

The most picturesque part of the trip will be from Calgary to Vancouver. At Calgary the highway will leave the prairies, and toward the foothills of the Rockies, penetrate the fastnesses of the mountains ninety miles away, at Banff, where it will turn into the Vermilion Pass and go down the valley of the Columbia to Golden. Already the run has been made by automobile from Golden to Calgary, and it will not be long, it is said, before the trail to Nelson, Grand Forks and Vancouver is finished.

LONDON UNIONS TO AMALGAMATE

LONDON, July 4.—The amalgamation of the trades unions goes steadily forward. Following closely upon the working agreement between the miners, transport workers and railwaymen, with a total membership of 1,350,000, which has now been finally settled, the General Laborers union, which has an immense organization spreading all over the country, has been admitted to the amalgamation. Thus practically all the unions, whose members mine coal, or handle the freight of the country are in one organization.

This is the reply of the workers to the combination of the employers of the country, but it is only part of what the trades unionists aim at. They are working for a general amalgamation of the lesser skilled or general labor. At present the workmen are faced with an alarming growth in the employment of cheap Chinese and other eastern labor, chiefly at the great ports, where Chinamen and Indians are arriving in increasing numbers, and they project some drastic action, either political or direct, to put a stop to this competition.

NORWEGIAN-SWEDISH ALLIANCE IS URGED BY MANY POLITICIANS

STOCKHOLM, July 4.—The campaign for an alliance between Norway and Sweden continues without a dissenting note. Prominent politicians of all parties are advocating such a course on the public platforms, and in the newspapers. The movement, however, still lacks any official action. Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer, and Sigurd Isben, have exchanged visits between Stockholm and Christiania, and each has found public sentiment agreeable to the proposed alliance. The irreconcilable differences which led to the disruption of the union between the two countries in 1905, and which barely escaped causing war, seem to have smoothed out to the extent at least that both peoples desire to unite in a defensive alliance against possible Russian aggression.

The increase in the army and navy of Sweden, instead of exciting the concern of Norway, is greeted there with the utmost satisfaction, it is said, and Norway itself has a strong movement under way for an increase in armaments. Ibsen, in his lectures here, has argued that the two foreign offices and the general staffs should have some formal arrangement for working together in case of war.

CUDAHY CHARGES BANK OFFICIALS STOLE $25,000

CHICAGO, July 4.—Charges that officials of the closed La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank fraudulently appropriated two checks totaling $25,000, were made by John Cudahy, the packer, in an intervening petition filed in the circuit court.

Cudahy borrowed $25,000 from the bank on February 24, according to the petition. On June 9, 15 days before the note was due, he received a letter from C. B. Mundas, vice president of the bank, which stated:

"We are endeavoring to build up our reserve and would like to ask you if it would inconvenience you too much to pay your $25,000 note."

The petition states that on June 11, the day before the bank was closed, Mr. Cudahy sent two checks with which to take up the note. The checks were accepted by the bank, but the note was not delivered, the petition says. Mr. Cudahy learned, he asserts, that on June 10 his notes were sold to the Auburn State bank and therefore acceptance of the checks was fraudulent. He said he was compelled to pay the note a second time when it became due on June 24.

Several depositors have complained to United States District Attorney James H. Wilkerson that a report of the bank's assets sent through the mails was misleading, and have asked for prosecution for violation of the postal laws.

THAMES RIVER UNDERGOES A GREAT TRANSFORMATION

LONDON, July 4.—A great transformation is taking place along the lower stretches of the Thames. Old docks are being enlarged, and new ones built, under the scheme of the Port of London Authority to increase the trade of London. New model towns are springing up where once great slums existed, and within a few years Thamesside will have entirely changed its appearance.

The most important item in the Authority's program is a magnificent deep water dock, which is being cut south of the Royal Albert docks. When complete it will cover 66 acres, and the mean depth will be 35 feet. So far 2,000,000 cubic yards of earth have been excavated and as much again remains to be removed.

To rehouse people displaced by the new dock, the Authority will erect 167 houses in West Ham on garden city lines, on the basis of 22 to the acre. In Woolwich forty houses are to be erected.

TURKEY TRIES TO STOP USE HEBREW LANGUAGE

JERUSALEM, July 4.—The Turkish government has issued orders against posting notices in Hebrew upon the dead walls of cities of Palestine. The action is believed to indicate concern on the part of the authorities over the remarkable revival of the Hebrew language.

Although up to 30 years ago classic Hebrew was not ordinarily used by the Jews of Palestine, it is now the common language of tens of thousands of people in Palestine. It is the medium of instruction in many schools, and newspapers, street car tickets and shopkeepers signs are in Hebrew. It is therefore apparent that the authorities will have a hard time if they propose to check the spread of the language.

The revival of the pure Biblical tongue has been, in a measure, forced on the Palestine Jews for reasons apart from the sentimental. Immigration from other parts of the world, particularly of the 13,000 Yiddish speaking Jews from Russia some years ago, made a common means of communication necessary. Yiddish is not understood by the natives here, while all Jews know something of Hebrew.

The Zionist movement aimed first at restoring Palestine to the Jewish race, has done much to finance the Hebrew schools, and is now raising a fund to endow a Hebrew university at Jerusalem.

LOSES $1,500,000 BY COURT DECISION

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 4.—James Dunsmuir, former lieutenant governor of British Columbia, and the richest citizen of this province, loses a million and a half dollars by an adverse judgment delivered today by the privy council in London, the highest court in the British empire.

Two years ago Mr. Dunsmuir sold his coal mines on Vancouver island to Sir William MacKenzie and Sir Donald Mann for $11,000,000. The new owners allege that they bought the current account in the bank as well as two steamers used in the coal carrying trade. Mr. Dunsmuir, a few days before the transfer, declared a dividend to himself which wiped out the bank balance of several hundred thousand dollars. He also contended that the coal mines alone were sold and not the steamers.

The privy council has decided in favor of the new owners, with costs.

Police Try to Identify Man Killed in Home of Aged Chicago Couple

YORKVILLE, Ill., July 4.—Chicago police have been asked to identify the man carrying evidence of having made $5,000 this week by speculations on the board of trade, who early today was throttled and killed by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Grimwood, an aged couple whose home he entered, supposedly for robbery.

In the inside pocket of the man's new coat were found board of trade slips issued to William Davis by the firm of David L. Barnsdoll, Chicago. They showed that Davis had traded on June 24, 29, 30 and July 1 and that he had profited to the extent of $4,000 or $5,000.

The burglar was about 35 years old, smooth shaven, and all his clothing was new, his suit bearing the label of a Chicago retail store.

Armed with an ice pick he fought in the dark of the bedroom of the Grimwood home with Mr. Grimwood, who had a club. Although nearly 70 years old, Grimwood got his antagonist to the floor and choked him into insensibility. He asked his wife to hold the stranger while he got a rope. Mrs. Grimwood grasped the man by the throat and when her husband returned the man was dead. The aged couple were exonerated by the verdict of a coroner's jury.

CHICAGO BUSINESS MEN GO TO WASHINGTON TUESDAY TO CONFER WITH WILSON

CHICAGO, July 4.—The committee of Chicago business men selected yesterday to represent this city in the conferences to be held by President Wilson with business men of the country will leave for Washington Tuesday, it was announced today.

The committee is headed by Joseph H. Defrees of the Chicago association of commerce which named the delegation. Mr. Defrees is a former president of the Chicago Bar association. The other delegates are members of some of the largest firms distributing merchandise in this trade territory.

"We represent 'big business,'" said one member of the committee, "and who has a better right to explain the needs of business?"

"The president has asked for the views of business and it is our duty to give him the desired information," said Mr. Defrees.

U. S. PURE FOOD LAWS MODEL FOR THE ENGLISH

LONDON, July 4.—The United States pure food laws are held up as a model by Alfred Moore, secretary of the British Pure Food and Health society, who applauds the Englishman for his apathy along this line. The British public, he says, is defrauded of over $800,000,000 annually through adulterated foods, for refuses to take the slightest interest in protective laws.

"In this country," asserts Mr. Moore, "the people seem to prefer to go on having plaster of paris in their flour, foreign fats and unwholesome preservatives in their butter, imitation cream cheese with the rind made of barytes and tallow, redried tea leaves instead of tea, chicory instead of coffee, starch and powdered bean shell instead of cocoa, French chalk masquerading as rice, water and salicylic acid as wine, and so on ad nauseam."

Besides adulteration, Mr. Moore charges that the people also tolerate filthy ways of handling foods, such as carting meat uncovered through the streets.

ASQUITH THRIVES UNDER LONG POLITICAL TENURE

LONDON, July 4.—Premier Asquith has now held office for just six years, thus exceeding in length the administration of Disraeli, who occupied the office from 1874 to 1880. Since the days of Lord Liverpool, who was prime minister for fifteen years, there have been only three statesmen who have held office for a longer period, without a break, than Mr. Asquith. Two of these, Lord Melbourne and Lord Palmerston, both were prime minister for about two months longer than Mr. Asquith has been so far. The third case is that of Lord Salisbury, who was prime minister for exactly seven years, from 1895 to 1902. Lord Palmerston, during his long term of power, was, like Mr. Asquith, leader of the house of commons as well as prime minister. The others, however, sat in the quiet atmosphere of the house of lords. The present prime minister, too, has taken an extra burden of the office of secretary of war, and his administration has been at least as full of hard work as any in modern times.

Through it all Mr. Asquith, although the strain must be great, seems to thrive. He has certainly aged somewhat, but so have all those who have gone through the last few strenuous years with him. He is still the master of the house of commons, having no equal, except perhaps Mr. Balfour, in debate while, as a political tactician none come within miles of him. Even should the Ulster question prove to be beyond his powers of getting over difficult situations, he will be able to look back upon a long series of successes.

MME SIMCOX DESCRIBES

Various Forms of The Tunic

MME SIMCOX IS AMERICA'S GREATEST DESIGNER & CREATOR OF FASHION

COPYRIGHT · 1914 · CLARA·E·SIMCOX · 535 · 5·AVE·N·Y·

SUMMER days are here and summer modes. And as you study the interesting presentations of the individual couturiers it seems as though the spring maid had peeped in her mirror and found her attire a trifle too buoyantly youthful. The summer girl has smoothed away her hip puffs, straightened out her frills and drawn them downward into prim looking tunics and skirts.

To be sure, some of the puffs refuse to "stay put" and dare still saucily outward, but the direction of the modes is toward the elongated silhouette. Milady has also pulled down her belt, and the bodice of her gown is developed into a long narrow basque that possesses a decided suggestion of the Victorian era of dress.

The neck of her frock is cut with a deep curve at the throat, which invites the use of a flaring Norman or Gladstone collar, while the sleeves droop modestly over the shoulders.

The maid of the spring opening has certainly "reefed her sails," although I am glad she let the little breezes puff them gayly for the first spring months. Who was not happier for the buoyancy and fresh colors of these early styles? However, youthful modes that incline to frivolity have passed with the season, and the later models are really more practical in that they suit all figures. Summer garb affects a straighter contour, which tends to give more slenderness to the wearer—a feature that will doubtless bring joy to the woman whose embonpoint was accentuated in the spring modes. In these new creations the breezes have gone out of the puffs and the summer sun has allowed the frills to droop.

The tunic which has brought about this wonderful change of outline masquerades in several different forms and, not content with monopolizing the skirt, invades many another department of dress. There is the straight tunic that is frequently the distinctive note in the smartly tailored suit. This may be slightly gathered at the waist so that it fits rather snugly around the figure and extends well below the knee. Various individual touches are noted on such modes, and, as I think a concrete example always better than a lot of generalities, I will describe one or two that merely hint of the divers ways in which these may be modeled. On a mastic colored suit very attractive motifs were embroidered in silk floss at the center front, on the sides and in the rear. The design, inspired by the Iris, was decidedly decorative and allowed the introduction of most beautiful lavender and green silks whose lovely color was enhanced by the tiny specks of rich brick red that were cleverly combined in the ornament.

On another model worn by a young woman who dearly loves the out of doors and insists on wearing navy blue irrespective of the demands of fashion bias bands of striped silk bound the blue gabardine. As if to indicate a panel in front two folds of the silk radiated toward the waistline and in the center back one long strip of silk flanked with folds of shorter length gave an attractive finish to the creation.

When something less simple, but still rather tailored, is desired, especially when wool fabrics are used, the tunic is ofttimes developed in large pleats that are stitched part way so that there is no great bunchiness around the hips. A very different arrangement is sometimes given when the tunic seems to be evolved from a close-fitting yoke. A pleasing tailleur which I designed for the young woman to whom I have already referred was fashioned with a small smocked panel just below the girdle in the front, so that the fullness was greatest over the instep.

A Gown of Rare Charm.

The possibilities for novel treatment of the tunic are even greater in silk and in cotton materials, as they are so much lighter in weight and more pliable. A charming rendition of this adornment is pictured in the illustration marked No. 2. Here the tunic lacks any semblance of formality and to the careless eye seems to suggest the shawl-like draperies that dark skinned women of other lands adopt. However, this tunic is very cleverly arranged. In the front of the figure it is fastened just below the waistline, and as it is drawn towards the back it reveals a small triangular section of the lace flouncing that distinguishes this creation. A cluster of roses skilfully conceals its point of contact, and from this it hangs loosely apart, so that one may look with satisfaction at the magnificent lace underskirt.

The corsage, which is remarkably decollete, possesses an inverted pleated flounce of handsome lace that balances the spreading ends of the silk tunic, while the coiffure boasts of a richly jeweled Spanish comb.

However, the tunic appears not alone on the elaborate evening gown or artistic tailleur. The afternoon dress is enriched by it in one of its manifold forms. A creation that displays many of the most delectable features of the present modes is depicted in the sketch marked No. 1. This gown is most picturesque, for the coat-like waist is originated from a magnificent white Chinese silk exquisitely embroidered with the wonderful colors of the Orient. Conforming to the present vogue for some mannish detail on the most feminine of costumes, it is elaborated with a straightly cut waistcoat of chrysanthemum yellow. Small silk covered buttons reflect the modes of our ancestors, while a flaring Norman collar of sheerest batiste crests this adorable creation.

But our interest for the moment is in the skirt whose tight fitting foundation of yellow satin contrasts strikingly with the tunic of black ninon. Closely pleated, its many folds advance and retreat as milady turns hither and thither about when she meanders through the beautiful gardens or dilates on the latest sociological questions as she stays within the salon of some learned friend. A charming dash of color which one must not overlook is found in the roses that mark the limits of the black silk girdle, for these are evolved from rich shades of violet.

But so great is the enthusiasm for the tunic at this time that even the tailored coat is distinguished by tunic-like appendages that doubtless foretell the return of the redingote.

The Tunic Masquerades on the Coat.

The illustration No. 4 is a particularly good example of the unusual manifestations of this characteristic feature. The coat is very quaintly modeled in the styles that were adored by the women of the Victorian era. Distinction is attained by the pleated tunic that extends around the sides and back of this much buttoned garment.

The skirt shows the tunic in uncommon guise. Almost concealing the tight-fitting underskirt, it originates just below the knee and attains a certain fullness by the many pleats which compose it. Although this creation is rather severe in its style, dainty touches are obtained by the adorable cuffs and collar of fine white organdy.

Even the cape seems to have come under the spell of the tunic. The lovely wrap designated as No. 3 on this page shows tier after tier of beautifully pleated chiffon, whose spiral drapery proves a charming sheath-like covering for the closely-draped inner shell of liberty satin. Black is favored for this production, which depends for its artistic success on the rare richness of the fabrics. However, this style would also be most pleasing if evolved from some of the colors that nature uses. You know the lovely warm browns with which she covers her buds? Well, just let us suppose that the inner wrap is made from a silk of that tone, while the lacey wings are fashioned from delicate cream lace. In this scheme we have reversed the order of nature, but the result is charming.

Monkey Fur Is the New Decoration.

A very unusual decoration of monkey fur forms the collar of this wrap. This fur, which is quite a fashionable "trapping" at this time, is sometimes so closely set around the throat that it gives the appearance of whiskers and is really only chosen by women who delight in eccentric adornments.

Sometimes I feel that, after all, good taste in dress is a gift from the gods—purely artistic and inspirational. Nevertheless, even if you possess this sense, you must give careful thought to the artistry of clothes, for much distinction and charm are achieved by intelligent observation and adaptation. Lack of imagination is frequently the cause of failure in successful dressing.

There came to my atelier this spring one of the season's most attractive debutantes, whose portrait has smiled to you more than once from the society columns (but, like priests and physicians, we designers must tell no names). As she crossed the threshold it was delightful to see her enthusiasm over some of my creations. She would fain have selected one costume after another, but my artistic sense triumphed over any commercial desire.

All the gowns were exquisite in themselves—"joys," my young client named them. However, I told her I wished to chat a bit about clothes before we talked gowns. Needing living texts for my subject, we laid aside conventions to the extent of stepping into Sherry's for luncheon.

Your Personality Is Emphasized In Your Dress.

Between the unfolding of our serviettes and the drinking of our coffee, with gay folk all around us for inspiration, I expatiated on my pet theme. The young girl listened most intelligently, as I found when we again returned to my salons. After discussing the psychology of modes and colors in relation to the personality of the wearer and emphasizing it, even dipping a bit into the occult and touching upon the so-called astral colors, I commenced my salad with the following homily: "Youth is an egoist. That is part of its charm, for youth is infinitely sure of its place in the universe. So in clothes one must never lose sight of one's own personality and faithfully clothe it. If only we might stand on one of Whistler's black velvet floors and have the whole studio to ourselves dress would be a simple matter.

But as it is, the problem of harmony extends not only to the wearer, but to the surroundings in which the gown appears. Fancy that cerise faille you wanted in Mrs. S—— rose salon. Myriad other gowns will be there, and you must be able in your dress not only to challenge them, but bear their possible detraction.

This is why my artistic self always prefers a gown that expresses a single, well thought-out color note. It is sure to achieve distinction among a legion of costumes, beautiful in themselves, but through the employment of various ill-chosen contrasts, failing in the scheme of the complete picture.

Present modes demand variety in color and line, and at this point we artists assert our skill to concoct a gown beautiful as a design, and yet a distinct unit of color and line in the crowded ball room or throughout avenue.

Dressing is a careful art, and enthusiasm will help, but not altogether achieve. I concluded, as we turned again to the selection of gowns for this beautiful young woman.

Correct Accessories Must Complete the Costume.

Variety and charming bits of color are often effected by the correct accessories. Have you not seen a picture in which the artist led you deftly to a dash of brilliant color perhaps merely by a dash of vermilion or emerald green which made the picture? Of like importance are accessories. A gay parasol will frivol a wh— costume or a smart bag enliven it. This is a season when a great variety of ingeniously shaped and covered parasols are being carried. There are Minaret, Japanese and dome shapes. In other styles the ribs are bent in eccentric outward or downward curves, and as for covers chiffon, lace, silk and chiffon afford a delectable choice. Indeed from filmiest lace creations to colored goings there is such assortment that milady's choice is practically unlimited.

Broad black stripes upon white are exceedingly well liked. Some of these show a plain border of tomato red, green, purple or rose. Roman stripes or Scotch plaids, too, are effective, although the dainty summer maid is glad that this is a season of the "Reign of Lace," for this fabric bespeaks the innate refinement that is incomparably associated with good birth and breeding.

Handles are both plain and elaborate. Long enamel sticks are frequently seen. There are also carved ivory handles, while some are studded with semi-precious stones and iridescent beads. Fine Dresden china was chosen for the handle of an exquisite pompadour silk.

Novelties In Neckwear.

In neckwear the collar that is now the delight of the fashionable woman shows greater width and is more wired, so that the frills are fast becoming more Elizabethan in proportions. A tight-fitting little taffeta suit showed a round, upstanding neck frill, compelling milady's chin to look up persistently, not down. Organdy combined with ostrich banding is another smart style, while some of the newest jackets have side pleated frills of sheerest linen plainly hemstitched or edged with lace.

Cobwebby materials are employed, and the capes at the back of the collar vary from a pleated sailor-shaped model to a long stole reaching to the hips. Occasionally a sheer frock has a wide sash with this stole-like cape in black or other pronounced color.

The gauntlet cuff is favored, and it in turn has often a small inverted gauntlet at the wrist.

Velvet is advancing in favor and this is noticed in several of the details of the smartly gowned woman. Many of the loveliest evening gowns have snug-fitting underdresses of black. Indeed, deep hems of velvet are often used on the afternoon or lingerie frock, while some of the most adorable white taffeta silks are girdled with folds of velvet in glowing colors. Occasionally these present a slightly tailored aspect and are finished with large smoked pearl buttons. Of course the velvet hat is again in evidence, made entirely of the material or combined with lace or fine braid.

WORK and PLAY for the IDLE HOUR

Byron Collar

TWO designs are given for this simple, but most effective collar, book muslin with the hem turned any size desired and held in place with the design is a very easy and quick method of working. These patterns are to be darned in. Black or plain white gives a style and finish which nothing else can give and many worn with any waist that collars of this kind are used for.

Two collars, one close to the other, look well if made to harmonize with the waist.

Any sheer material may be used for the collars. There is an organd that launders now on the market which is very practical and attractive.

LETTERING ON LEATHER BAGS

The alphabets published from time to time may be used for purposes other than embroidery. Use either one letter or a monogram for suit cases, bags of either leather or straw, also for shirt-waist boxes that are covered with matting.

Transfer the letters to the bag and if the bag is black use red instead of dark impression paper. The remainder of the work resembles stenciling.

Go over the letters with a pencil, so that all the outlines are clear, then fill in the letter with paint. Use oil colors diluted with a very little turpentine, to which dryer has been added. A number six brush or any other small one may be used, depending on the size of the letter. It may take the paint some time to dry. Oil paint may be bought in half tubes of any color.

Old English, Gothic or Roman letters are best, or any other style that is more or less plain and not difficult to paint.

In traveling, especially abroad, it is hard to identify one's trunk from among many, and while it may seem a crude idea, you will find it helpful to paint your name or initials in some very brilliant color on perhaps the four corners of the trunk, then by a single glance, you can distinguish your trunk from among a number. When you return you can easily repaint the letters in a more subdued color.

Use of Thumb Tacks

In transferring a design to material, it is often a difficult matter to keep both smooth and without creases, even though pins are used. Thumb tacks or glass push pins are much more satisfactory.

Push them into a small piece of wood or keep them in a little dish or bottle. Every time they are used count them, and when through working be sure you have all of them. If one is missing, search until it is found, as they frequently fall to the floor with the point upward, for this reason, one should be especially careful if there are children or pets in the house.

CORONATION BRAID AND CROCHET

CORONATION braid combined with simple crochet stitches can be made into decorative motifs and insertion, which can be applied and adapted to a large number of useful and practical purposes.

The large drawings which show in detail how the work is done are one and one-half the original size the finished work would be if No. 2 coronation braid and cordonette special No. 50 were used.

Either pink or blue crochet cotton should be used with the white braid for the round motif. For a towel insertion, blue and white would be attractive, a row of blue on each side of the braid with the second row in white. The edging should match whatever color is chosen for the insertion.

To make the straight insertion, bend the braid as indicated by the drawing (a basting thread taken directly through the center of the braid, as it is turned back and forth will hold it in place and so facilitate the handling of the braid), take four double crochets over the stem of the braid, one chain, four d. c. over the next stem, one ch. Repeat the length of the insertion. Turn, make a row of d. c. and ch. stitches, catching 1 d. c. over ch. of the first row. Make two rows on the other side of the braid, remove the basting which held the braid and the insertion is complete.

If the edging is used on a towel or other fabric, then a row of d. c. are taken along this edge, forming the foundation for the edging. If, however, it borders a piece of crochet, the stitches are taken at regular intervals over the last row of crochet.

First Row—1 d. c., 1 ch., 1 d. c. (taken in the same stitch as first d. c.), 2 ch. Skip 2 ch. on the foundation and repeat until the desired length is made.

Third Row—3 d. c. over 1 ch. of previous row, one single crochet over 2 ch. of previous row, repeat the length of the edging.

The round motif is made by folding the braid as illustrated, then taking 3 d. c. (in the center) over each loop, 1 ch. between every group of 3 d. c. 2d row: 2 d. c. over 1 ch. of first row. Outside row: 5 d. c. in each loop, 3 ch. between the groups of 5 d. c.

Three of these motifs placed at regular intervals across a towel end would make unique and effect insets, and with the edging as given above would make very pleasing gift towels. These motifs could also be arranged to form a border above the hem of a scarf or they could be inset in groups along the front and ends of a dresser scarf. If made of ecru coronation braid and ecru crochet cotton, they would make an effective trimming for a crash or ecru linen runner, and this gives the idea of a pillow to match the runner. The circles could be joined to make an inset border across each end of a long pillow, or they could be grouped in each corner. The possibilities of this round motif are endless, one arrangement indicating another.

A towel insertion made exactly like the directions with the edging as given above developed in pink and white or blue and white, will be found so charming that more difficult adaptations will be attempted.

When applying the insertion to circular forms, the number of double crochets and chain stitches will have to be increased or decreased along the outer and inner edge of the braid. In the case of a collar, a paper pattern should first be cut, so as to serve as a guide when shaping the braid. A part of the collar may be of linen, which would make less of the crochet necessary. A collar of this sort would look well on a child's pique coat.

TO WHILE AWAY HOT DAYS

When a woman must remain at home the greater part of the Summer she is entitled to the luxury of providing some pretty pick-up work for passing away the time. Most women feel that they have enough plain sewing to do, to avoid any unnecessary labor, but the woman who can make dainty trifles, crochet or knit or embroider, will find that the pleasure of handling pretty things is very different from hemming dish-towels and mending, for instance.

When the hands are employed, the mind is quieted and in this way a great deal of pleasant labor can be accomplished and the results laid away for the inevitable bazaars and Christmas demands, for in the busy autumn there is little chance for handwork.

There is nothing like sitting still and thinking about the weather to make one feel the heat, and the experiment of a little employment which is really a luxury is worth a trial.

The woman away does not hesitate to spend a great deal of time in fancy work, and it is certainly not extravagant for her less fortunate neighbor who remains at home to seek a little mild pleasure of the same kind.

If possible take your work, a paper or book and take a car to one of the many pleasant places in the suburbs or park and with the aid of a camp-stool, a pleasant and profitable half day can be passed out-of-doors. It may seem an effort the first time, but after that the experiment will be gladly repeated.

ELEANOR NORRIS ANSWERS QUESTIONS ABOUT NEEDLEWORK

A New Gift.

ALICE, R.—The small wooden boxes with lids, which make such handy receptacles for the pantry, can be turned into quite a charming little gift for the bride's kitchen. They are given a coat of white enamel, inside as well as outside, which renders them easier to clean, and then they are decorated in bright colors.

One seen the other day had a crude design, copied from a bit of Bulgarian trimming, and painted in reds, blues and yellows. It was very attractive and quite in keeping with the box it decorated. Another had a band of blue encircling the lid, inside of which was a little Dutch girl in her quaint pointed cap. A wider band of blue was painted around the sides of the box.

These round wooden boxes can be purchased in the household department of any of the large stores.

Old Linen Blue

Mrs. N. W.—Anyone fortunate enough to have a pair of old linen sheets could utilize them for Summer portieres. They can be dyed any color you like, a light tone, a stenciled pattern in border effect can be used to decorate them. They, however, make good-looking portieres without any attempt at decoration.

A beautiful pair of over curtains made from a pair of old sheets that had been dyed green were hung over cream net. These curtains had a very rich look not unlike heavy silk.

Fuchsia Design

Miss H.—The beauty of a repeated pattern is often lost if it is not developed in a way to bring out the design. Work the groups of the flowers in different stitches, for the design is not very conventional and should not be embroidered in the same stitch or the effect would be monotonous.

Embroider the calyx in solid satin stitch. Outline the cup shaped portion with the tumbleticks in satin stitch. The underneath petals, that extend beyond the cup, in Italian relief, and the stamens in outline with the pollen represented by French knots. The leaves should be half solid, the other half outlined and filled with seeding. The stems can either be outlined or done in French stem stitch.

You will find that this development will make a most attractive pattern when finished. A touch of Italian relief will give the needed contrast and add a great deal of charm to the finished work. It should not be done with heavy cotton or it will be too heavy for the remainder of the design. About four strands of the six-stranded cotton would give a soft and silky effect.

When Italian relief is used in this way the first row is caught in the material and the two end stitches of each row are also caught in the material. This is to prevent it standing in too high relief, for the effect would not be attained if this portion completely overshadowed the rest of the flower.

Japanese Designs.

Miss W. B.—The embroidery patterns of Japanese scenes, which are very quaint and charming and still so popular, should be worked with two strands of the mouline cotton. A single strand is sometimes used for the more minute details.

If heavier cotton is employed it detracts from the sketchy effect and so fails to convey the right impression.

Most of these designs are carried out in shades of blue, but various bright colors can be used with splendid results so long as the work is kept delicate and suggestive. This is accomplished by using straight line stitches, weaving and Kensington outline.

These designs are generally seen on towel ends, but they can be applied with decorative effect to dresser scarfs, table runners and pillows.

Linen Card Case.

Mrs. B. W.—The white linen card-cases always find favor for Summer use and can be developed in many pleasing ways. A particularly attractive one, which was quite new in its application was a piece of embroidered linen tacked over a foundation case of lavender silk. When the white cover became soiled, it could readily be removed, laundered and tacked, with a few stitches, into place again. The embroidery was in a pattern of clover leaves. The leaves were of Val. lace, held in place by a line of French stemming around each leaf. The linen, was of course, cut away from underneath the lace. The edge was hemstitched and finished with an edging of very narrow Val. lace, mitered at the corners and applied without any fullness along the edge of the linen. As lace is now so much in vogue, the cardcase cover was quite smart. This same idea could be applied in other ways. A case of blue silk with a Japanese design in old blues on white linen would be very modish.

An old cardcase could be used as guide when cutting a pattern for the foundation. Cut two very thin pieces of cardboard the correct length, make a pocket on the inside of each one at both ends and then overhand the two pieces together. Fold through the center and the cardcase is ready for the linen cover.

Round Weave Linen.

H. J.—The round weave linen is that which has not been calendered, that is, pressed through the rollers and filled with dressing. The soft texture of the round thread linen makes it especially suited to [illegible]lework and should be used for this purpose.

The little cares that fretted me, I lost them yesterday
Among the fields above the sea, among the winds at play;
Among the lowing of the herds, the rustling of the trees,
Among the singing of the birds, the humming of the bees.
The foolish fears of what might happen, I cast them all away
Among the clove-scented grass, among the new-mown hay,
Among the husking of the corn where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born—
Out in the fields with God.

The Home Beauty Parlor
by Betty Dean

Mrs. M.: I am certain a daily massage with an almozoin cream jelly will soon dispel your wrinkles and clear the skin of local impurities, leaving it smooth and velvety and give to it the pink and white bloom of youth. To prepare the cream jelly at home, just dissolve 1 ounce almozoin (get from druggist) in ½ pint cold water and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. To remove wrinkles, massage a little of the cream jelly lengthwise of the creases. The starved tissues respond to this treatment and assume their correct proportions, then the skin will be smooth and wrinkleless. The almozoin cream jelly is especially good to cleanse the skin of pimples and blackheads.

R. N. L.: I have found a splendid spring tonic and regulator which can be made at little cost by putting 1 ounce kardene (from druggist) into ½ pint alcohol and ½ cupful sugar, then pouring hot water in to make a quart. Take of this 1 tablespoonful 3 times each day. Stomach upsets, deranged liver, clogged kidneys and blood disorders yield quickly to the kardene treatment, and for restoring health and energy it is not surpassed.

Elsie: You can make that cleansing, invigorating shampoo mixture mentioned in last issue, by dissolving a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup hot water. This rubs up into a white, thick lather that soothes and cleanses the scalp, and rinsing removes all dust, dandruff and excess oil. After a canthrox shampoo the hair dries quickly and evenly and is ever so soft, fluffy and easy to do up. Your shampoos with canthrox will promote hair health and hair beauty and encourage a thick, beautiful growth.

Lois: This is my recipe for a valuable skin lotion: In ½ pint hot water or witch hazel, dissolve 4 ounces spurmax, which you can get at any drug store, then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply to face, neck and arms and rub lightly until dry. This clears the skin of pimples, blackheads and discolorations and restores the rosy tint of healthy maidenhood. This lotion is invisible when on and gives an added touch of loveliness to the daintiest complexion. It is particularly fine for banishing the oily, sallow, "muddy" appearance.

Mrs. G. E. S.: To make your too-fat figure round and just right, dissolve 4 ounces of parnotis (from drug store) in 1½ pints hot water. When cool, strain and take a tablespoonful at meal time. This is a rational, harmless treatment and gently dissolves the fat without leaving the skin wrinkled or the flesh flabby. The parnotis treatment acts differently from others inasmuch as it restores the graceful lines to the figure and when the weight is sufficiently reduced the treatment can be discontinued.

J. O.: Try the crystos eye tonic I have frequently mentioned in these columns and I am certain you will obtain prompt relief from your sore, watery eyes. To make the tonic at home, simply dissolve 1 ounce crystos in a pint of clear water. Two or three drops should be put in each eye a few times each day until permanent relief is had. The crystos tonic is especially fine for tired, aching muscles and for granulated lids. Its use will give to dull eyes a delightful sparkle and expression.

Flo: For a good hair tonic, I put 1 ounce quinzoin (your druggist keeps it), into ½ pint of alcohol, then add ½ pint water and you will have a pint of the very best tonic for hair and scalp at little cost. The quinzoin tonic almost instantly relieves the burning, itching sensation and soon corrects unnatural conditions so that you will not be bothered with profuse dandruff or excess oil. Discolored, streaky, brittle hair regains its natural even color and softness with the use of this tonic and its use is a positive benefit to the growth of the hair.

THE PLAY HOUSES

THE GHOST BREAKER AT THE BURNS THIS WEEK

SECOND PRODUCTION IS ROARING FARCE COMEDY

Malcolm Duncan as Warren Jarvis, on the left, and Roy Briant as Rusty Snow, on the right, in a scene from the fourth act of "The Ghost Breaker," at the Burns tomorro w night and week.

Goddard-Dickey Play Promises to Provide as Much Fun as 'The Spendthrift' Did Thought; Two More Added to Company

With a cast of 15 people, much larger than the usual number of players required for the production of most plays, "The Ghost Breaker," a laughter-compelling comedy drama, is to be the offering for the second week of the Burns summer stock season. The production of "The Spendthrift," the opening bill, served to introduce a capable and carefully selected company of players and the approval of all those who saw the play has demonstrated that Colorado Springs people will patronize a high-class company such as the Burns Players have proven themselves to be.

This week marks the appearance of William Reiffel and Edgar Mayo, whose engagement did not permit them to appear in the opening bill.

Fresh from a Kentucky feud to a fashionable New York hotel and thence via the Lusitania to a castle in Spain, offers conspicerable latitude to the dramatist. Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey, the authors, have been particularly successful in constructing a play that combines the most deadly melodrama with a succession of laughter-invoking situations, every one of which is fresh and original, and no one of which can be anticipated.

Donald Gregory, the director, has staged a production that will be impressive from a scenic standpoint and full of life and snap for the folks out front. So successful was "The Ghost Breaker" last year that both New York and Chicago gave it their warmest welcome, and it registered itself as one of the emphatic hits of the season. "The Ghost Breaker" has never been seen in Colorado, and only two weeks ago was released for stock production.

Attempting to escape from the hotel detectives, who are hot on his trail for the slaying of his feudist [redacted], Warren Jarvis of Kentucky [redacted] into the bedroom of Princess Maria Theresa of Aragon, who, once her fright is over, hires him to go to Spain to put out the ghosts, which, she says, are haunting her ancestral castle. From the time he is smuggled out of the hotel in a trunk, his adventures, thrilling or ludicrous, do not cease until he has dispelled the ghost, discovered the hidden treasure, overthrown the plotters against the princess and once more returned to America with the princess by his side.

Dare-Devil of the Movies Noted for Beauty, Ability and She's Keystone Mabel

MABEL NORMAND.

Mabel Normand, the daredevil of the movies, is one of the most, if not the most, popular and well-liked star in comic filmdom.

Miss Normand, or "Keystone Mabel," as she is perhaps better known, is not only a very beautiful woman, but an exceptionally clever one.

Her title, "The Daredevil of the Movies," is a well-earned one. For nowhere can one see the remarkable escapades, hairbreadth escapes, daredevil rides (whether they be in an aeroplane or auto racers) in motion pictures, as are depicted by this screen favorite.

Her fame is worldwide. Even in far-off Australia, Mabel Normand is as popular as with the movie fans of American.

One of her most remarkable accomplishments is the fact that even in the most rough-and-tumble parts this little daredevil manages to retain her dainty, immaculate, spick-and-span appearance. Unquestionably, this is one of her many, many charms. She is a brunette with dark-brown eyes, a fine, athletic figure, and in every movement shows strength, vitality and the joy of living. Every muscle is firm and her movements are as graceful and supple as a bird's. She swims as though water was made for her.

Miss Normand's versatility and remarkable daring, her brilliant beauty and her wonderful gift for the humorous make her one of the most fascinating actresses in pictures or even the legitimate.

Some think her power is due to a large extent to the extraordinary facility in facial expression.

That is probably one of the reasons why this remarkable little girl has reached the pinnacle of film success.

Some of the movie fans in Australia arranged to have her portrait hung in a conspicuous place in the Perth Institute Hall of Fame. The editor of one of the Railways Gazette, a man of note in his country, composed a beautiful poem most befitting to the beautiful Mabel. To say the least, this is going some, even for a moving picture actress! But, then, nothing could be too great for Mabel Normand!

For she is really a boon to human nature!

How many tired, wornout business men; how many tired mothers, weary after a day's toil, have been cheered by that cheeriest of cheerful comediennes, Mabel Normand!

So that, if for no other reason than the fact that she helps to make this happy world of ours happier by her merry antics and clever impersonations in the Keystone comedies, we ought to say, "Three cheers for Keystone Mabel, the daredevil of the Movies."

It is almost impossible to speak of Miss Normand without mentioning her able partner, Mack Sennett.

They are, indeed, a happy, merry combination.

Mr. Sennett did the wisest thing ever by making Miss Normand his leading lady, for there you have the ideal combination.

So, once again, "Three cheers for Mabel Normand, the merriest, jolliest daredevil of the Movies!"

OPERA HOUSE

"The Halfbreed's Sacrifice," by Romaine Fielding, will be shown tomorrow.

While walking beside a precipice, Manuel loses his balance and falls to the rocks below. Don Remo, an official, hastens to the halfbreed's rescue. Finding his hip is broken, he takes him to his home. When he recovers he is a cripple and the don keeps him as a body servant. The half breed, through thankfulness, becomes a human dog, following Don Remo like a shadow, attempting to protect him at every turn.

One day, Don Remo, the worse for liquor, starts out to tour the theaters in a lowly district. He meets and flirts with a noted dancer, much to the chagrin of Casimette's sweetheart. The halfbreed throws a stone which, by accident, strikes the girl, and she dies from its effects. Don Remo is warned by a friend that he is accused of the crime. Believing himself to be innocent, he determines upon flight. The breed follows him. The soldiers, who have been warned to take Don Remo, come upon him. A fight ensues, and the halfbreed, thinking his master wounded unto death, when in reality he has only fainted, tells the soldiers that it was he who committed the crime, and deliberately taking a knife from his belt, stabs himself and falls dead across his master's body. The don, recovering from his fainting spell, learns what has transpired. He instructs the soldiers to take the body of the halfbreed to his home, and says a prayer to God for his soul.

Coal taken from the Bering River field in Alaska and tested in the American navy to determine its fitness was a complete failure. This has proved a great disappointment to officials of the navy, who realize that the results of these tests have an important bearing upon the question of the future coal supply of the navy in Pacific waters.

New York Theaters

By EMORY B. CALVERT.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Despite the inroads of the movies there was one more production in the New York theaters the season just closing than in the winters of 1912-13. While this is not a healthy growth, it is more encouraging than some croakers would have one believe. I think there will be as many real good productions next winter as ever, although the number of poor and mediocre efforts may decline.

Last winter saw 151 new productions, besides 26 revivals, 15 adaptations and six dramatizations, making a total of 198 plays offered the theatergoing public here.

The New York Dramatic Mirror statistician informs me that of the entire number 26 were melodramas, 50 comedies, 18 dramas, 14 farces, 29 musical and 16 tragedies, three spectacles, six vaudevilles and 26 playlets. Of the whole number 113 appeared before New Years day.

The foreign authors lead the native-born. Eighty-four were American written and 92 penned abroad.

From the previous season were inherited "Peg o' My Heart" and "Within the Law," the former closing after 604 performances and the latter one less.

Arthur Hammerstein is purveying some interesting dancing to his audiences at the Victoria theater these days. There is Carmelita Ferrer, niece of the slain Spanish reformer, and also Alice Eis and Bert French, who present a curious sketch in which the woman tempts the man until she draws him into the crater of a volcano.

The remarkably well done illusion of lava is the feature of "The Temptress." Molten rocks flow, apparently, allowing the actors to step stream, with the bubbles arising as the mass closes behind their legs.

Alice Eis was clad in a skirt of grass, loose and swinging, and not much of a garment, unless the object of it be more to reveal than to conceal. Miss Eis' other extremities are shapely, and, beside the grass skirt there was (the audience thought) only short white tights and stockings below the knee to bar them from gaze. But one should not neglect Mr. French's dancing appendages either, for they were clad in green silk trousers. At the close of the dancing Miss Eis removed her green grass skirt and appeared with only a think pink scarf over her heaving shoulders.

Miss—pardon me—Senorita Ferrer dances in trousers. She is very graceful and magnetic and she wields the castenets in a manner American audiences seldom see. Her steps are modern and characteristic.

Off for some acting in the Blue mountains went a company of 20 Vitagraph players this week. It was their third summer invasion of the south. They will have their headquarters in picturesque Hendersonville, N. C.

The company will be in the mountains 10 weeks or more. Ned Finley, their director, will stage one, two and three reel pictures, the scenes to be laid amid the peaks 20 miles back from Hendersonville.

In the number are Ada Gifford, Edith Storey, S. Rankin Drew, nephew of John Drew, Jack Prawn, Logan Paul, Harry Hammill and Master Tommy Gordon.

As opera was used as movie material this week at the Strand theater when "Germania" was produced. The piece, you will remember, deals with the history of the German revolution and the coalition of the powers of Europe which caused the first rout of Napoleon at the battle of Leipsic, October 19, 1813. The Edison quartet added special musical and singing selections to accompany the film.

Right up to the minute is the Broadway Rose Gardens theater and Dance Pierrette (by, what, a name!) with its combined features of theater and garden, dining hall and dancing place.

The Broadway Rose Gardens occupy a tract at Fifty-third street, 50 by 200 feet, extending through from Broadway to Seventh avenue. The theater proper faces the former and its ornate front has become a familiar sight to many during the six months it has been under construction. The orchestra floor will accommodate 600 spectators. Overhanging this is a "golden horseshoe," devoted entirely to boxes and loges. A spacious private promenade flanks this section.

Under a similar arrangement the entire rear of the orchestra floor is given over to promenade boxes which form a graceful crescent below the "horseshoe." These are slightly raised, but there are no steps, both pillars and steps having been eliminated in the plans, save the steps that lead to the mezzannine.

The decorations are in gold, Tennessee marble and art plaster. There is no stage, merely the slightest suggestion of a platform, and no screen. A specially prepared panel in the decorations serves that purpose. A large orchestra is semiconcealed in a pit immediately before the platform, where also, is placed the keyboard of the huge pipe organ that will be employed to interpret appropriate parts of the musical settings of the pictures. A bower of foliage arches above, shutting out the high ceiling.

On either side of the auditorium a wide, roomy promenade extends from Broadway to Seventh avenue on both the orchestra and mezzanine level. These lead to the garden proper which occupies the entire Seventh avenue frontage. The garden consists of a ballroom with a dancing floor of 2,200 square feet surrounded by boxwood hedges and flanked by clerking porches and balconies. In the latter the Italian pergola style is followed, with rose vines trailing over the white supports and massing on a great arched lattice that forms the ceiling. Thousands of pink roses in full bloom give the establishment its name. Above a black dome arises equipped with twinkling stars that may be seen through the maze of blossoms.

Growing plants surmount the balustrades of the encircling porches. Pink flowers concealing frosted electric lamps furnish the illumination, throwing a pinkish amber glow over the dancers and tables. A huge electric [illegible] has been installed, similar to those used on the stage, through the use of which the soft amber hues diffused throughout the room from unseen sources can be made to fade into a deep pink, then to a sunset and twilight, finally merging into a bluish tinge as a full moon rises behind the foliage and myriads of fire flies among the rose vines.

Above the masking ceiling of flowers in both theater and ballroom the real roof is of the rolling type so that when the weather warrants it to be removed, leaving the merrymakers under the open sky. An elaborate ventilating scheme has been provided for use when the roof is in place. Volumes of air are pumped through an intake towering above the structure. The blast passes through a washing process by being forced through several sheets of water, and is then diffused throughout ballroom and theater by means of metal distributors reaching all parts of the building.

Two photoplay productions were the first offerings to be shown, "A Million-Dollar Mystery," which is to run indefinitely in serial form, and "The Terrors of the Deep," which is the first picture filmed under a new process by which photography is possible at the bottom of the sea.

The latter was made in southern waters where marine life abounds and includes a desperate battle between man and shark, taken in the West Indies.

The diver is shown without helmet or diving suit and unarmed save for a knife at his belt. Then comes the huge maneater, scenting his prey. Vainly the diver seeks to escape by swimming—the hungry monster, at home in his native element, pursues relentlessly. Then the fight is on.

Every time the shark turns over to crush the victim in his mighty jaws, the diver lunges at the monster with his knife. Repelled by pain, the shark veers off, only to return when he sees the diver seeking to escape. Again and again the attack is renewed, and each time the heroic diver drives him off. Finally the shark closes in for a finish fight. In desperation the diver throws his left arm about the huge fish to give himself a brace for the final thrust and in a moment his blade has reached a vital spot. The maneater floats away dead and the diver is ultimately hauled aboard the small boat from which he had been seeking coral.

The seven sons in the Burkheiser family of Detroit weigh 1,608 pounds. They are all between the ages of 29 and 38, are all married, and their average weight is nearly 230 pounds.

To enable ships' officers to detect their approach to icebergs there has been invented a microthermometer so delicate that it registers changes in sea water temperature to one-thousandth of a degree.

Malcolm Duncan's all-round versatility will be well demonstrated in his appearance as Warren Jarvis in "The Ghost Breaker" at the Burns this week. Splendid opportunity for comedy is offered and Mr. Duncan is delightfully funny as the chivalrous and quick-witted Kentuckian, the principal male part of the play.

WAS A CLEVER VIOLINIST; NOW MUSICAL COMEDY STAR

Hazel Dawn of "The Debutante" Forced to Take Up Singing Because of Broken Arm

Hazel Dawn, who is to be the star next season of "The Debutante," is telling her friends that she is delighted with the fact that in the new musical comedy which Harry B. and Robert B. Smith have written for her she is to be a simple maiden instead of a coquettish Parisienne. In both "The Pink Lady" and "The Little Cafe," the only two musical plays in which she has appeared in her native land, Miss Dawn has been obliged to impersonate young ladies of decidedly lively disposition. Now she is to be a demure and pleasant American girl.

The story has often been told about how the prima donna came to play the violin in "The Pink Lady;" that it was quite by accident that the management discovered that she was able to draw harmony from its strings and that she was allowed to introduce it at the last minute.

There is another story which has not been told. The reason why Hazel Dawn forsook the violin for musical comedy. It was because of a broken arm. When Hazel was just finishing her school days in England—her parents had destined her for a career as a musician—that one day in a foot race with the other girls, she tripped and fell and when picked up it was found that her arm had been broken. Since it was the left arm that had been fractured, it was many a day before she was able to again finger the strings of her violin, and it was then that she decided to become a vocalist, instead of an instrumentalist. Shortly after her recovery, George Edwardes engaged her for one of his musical comedies in London, and so it was that Hazel Dawn, violinist, became Hazel Dawn, prima donna. The broken arm has long since knitted, but the blonde beauty it irrevocably committed to musical comedy.

LINA CAVALIERI APPEARS AS MANON NOW ON SCREEN

Playgoers Company Presents Opera Star and Lucien Murgtore in Romantic Love Story

For more than a hundred years the romantic love story of Manon Lescaut has held firm place in the interest of readers the world over. On many stages have appeared many versions of the adventures and misadventures of Manon and her devoted chevalier. As an opera "Manon Lescaut" is known and welcomed in every temple devoted to the cult of dramatic lyricism. It was inevitable that the wayward, hapless Manon should also make her appearance upon the screens and under the auspices of the Playgoers Film company.

In selecting Lina Cavalieri to impersonate the heroine of Abbe Prevost's romance there was shown rare judgment. Her beauty and her dramatic talent combine in creating a Manon that meets every requirement of the most exigeant imagination. And in the role of her faithful lover, the Chevalier Des Grieux, Lucien Muratore forms a fitting complement. And so it has been throughout the entire cast of some 300 actors and actresses who appear in the staging of the photoplay; all were chosen with a care that results in a presentation for which the most devoted admirer of the romance can find only words of warmest praise.

From the first appearance of this wonderful perfect six-reel photoplay production the interest it excited has increased with every presentation. At Belasco's Republic theater in New York city, where it was first shown, there were crowded houses every day, and it needs no prophetic vision to predict for "Manon Lescaut" equally admiring welcome in every city in the country where seen.

SUNDAY COMPLIES WITH YOUNG AMERICA; PREACHES ON FOURTH 'MID DIN OF EXPLODING BOMBS

Firecrackers Hurled Into Tabernacle at Service Annoy Evangelist, but He Shows Gameness at Both Services; Will Preach Famous 'Booze' Sermon This Afternoon

State Historical and Natural History Society

Competing with Young America on the Fourth of July is something Billy Sunday probably won't want to do again. It is hardly likely he realized just what difficulties it offered when he entered the competition yesterday, but he proved himself no quitter.

He preached both services. Throughout his sermon last night he was interrupted every few minutes by the deafening explosions of giant firecrackers and aerial bombs and by the shrill shrieks of rockets rushing skyward—all expressions of the patriotism of youngsters of the immediate neighborhood. The cannonading further downtown, which caused most of the trouble during the afternoon, became almost nothing last night beside the noise in the vicinity of the tabernacle.

Sunday is annoyed by every little disturbance, so he suffered agonies last night. Every time a cracker exploded an expression of intense irritation involuntarily came over his face. He tried to suppress the feeling, but he invariably displayed it before he realized it. He apparently did not notice the noise during the song service, but the first cracker that exploded after he began to preach completely upset him.

Wished Shooters Would Stop.

"I wish those fools would wait until after we're through here," he said, disgustedly. "Can't someone step out and tell those chumps they're disturbing us. Call one of the cops out there and go over and ask them to wait an hour. They've had all day to shoot their firecrackers, and they can have all night so far as I'm concerned, if they give me just an hour. It seems they would have some respect for a church service. They know we're holding a meeting, and if they would only think they would see what trouble they are causing. No one likes better to see the kids give full vent to their patriotism on the Fourth than I do, but I do think they should respect our peace of mind when we ask for so little time."

Several ushers went around the neighborhood with the request, which the boys respected—for about 10 minutes. Sunday made no more comments on the matter, though he plainly showed what he thought of the kids. Just as he extended the invitation, the most critical moment in a Sunday meeting, someone fired a giant cracker in the doorway in the rear of the tabernacle, about 25 feet from the rostrum. What Sunday said no one heard, but he talked to himself for several minutes.

Few Hit Trail.

Possibly it was this act of thoughtlessness or meanness, or whatever it was, that completely spoiled the after service. At any rate, only 10 penitents came down the trails in response to the evangelist's invitation. Sunday did not urge them. In fact, he said almost nothing after he had extended his invitation. He stood spanning the little pit by the pulpit, a foot on either side, and slowly scanned the audience from one side of the big building to the other.

A similar incident occurred at the afternoon service. A crowd of men drove up to one of the Cascade avenue entrances in a big automobile, lighted a giant firecracker and tossed it far into the auditorium. It was just before the service started and the explosion almost caused a panic in the audience.

Last night was ranchers' night at the tabernacle. Because of the rain not more than 150 ranchers were present and they were scattered throughout the auditorium. When Chorister

HUERTA IS READY TO FLEE MEXICO

SCURAIN TO SUCCEED

TO PRESIDENCY

Election Will Be Held Today; Dictator May Be Sent to France

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Unofficial advices reaching Washington tonight indicate that Pedro Lascurain, former secretary of state in Francisco I. Madero's cabinet, would be elected tomorrow to succeed General Victoriano Huerta as president of Mexico, and that Huerta, resigning his former post as chief of staff of the army, would be dispatched to a foreign post, probably to France.

It was admitted that the voters in tomorrow's election would be few, only those who reside in the district of Mexico City participating. Candidates for the presidency, besides Mr. Lascurain, were said to be Gen. Refugio Vasquez and Gen. Garcia Pena. Whoever might be elected was reported to be ready to turn over the presidency to a provisional government, and Federal Huerta is willing to leave the country on the order of his successor, thereby saving his face.

According to information reaching Washington, General Huerta has prepared to leave Mexico, and arrangements had practically been concluded whereby Mr. Lascurain would be elected to the presidency thereby establishing the constitutional succession.

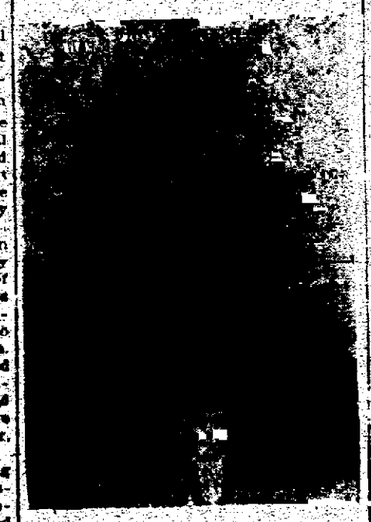

When President Madero and Vice President Suarez were assassinated in Mexico City, Mr. Lascurain was the logical successor to the presidency of the republic. He presented his resignation, but it was not accepted because there was no quorum of the Mexican congress present. That left Lascurain, under the terms of the Mexican constitution, as the logical president. Huerta, however, assumed the dictatorship.

Huerta, it is reported, is now ready to depart, his principal reason for flight being to save his family. A vessel to take the Huerta family is said to be waiting at Puerto [illegible].

FOURTH OF JULY BULLET STRIKES AGED PIONEER

Ashby McCreery, 90 Years Old, Struck in Arm by Stray Shot; Injury Not Serious

An unidentified man, in celebrating the Fourth of July by discharging a revolver loaded with ball cartridges, wounded Ashby McCreery of 410 South Weber street in the upper part of the left arm with a .32-caliber bullet.

ASHBY M'CREERY

shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The bullet, however, inflicted only a flesh wound.

McCreery, who is more than 90 years old and who has lived here for many years, was feeding his chickens at the time he was wounded. He did not hear the report of the pistol because of the noise made by exploding firecrackers, and it was several minutes before he knew that he had been shot. He felt a stinging sensation in his arm, looked down and saw a hole on his coat sleeve. The bullet was found imbedded in the flesh.

The police have been working on the case, but the identity of the person who fired the shot has not been learned.

NEWSPAPER CENSOR HERE ON VACATION

Editor of Topeka Journal to Keep Papers in His State Clean

Frank P. MacLennan, owner and editor of the Topeka Daily State Journal, and one of the influential newspapermen of Kansas, arrived in Colorado Springs yesterday and together with his family and several friends is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Elstun and Robert Elstun of the Alamo hotel. Mr. MacLennan and party will go to Cascade in a few days to spend the summer at his cottage there.

While running an independent paper, he is influential in Kansas politics and will return to Topeka the middle of this month to "mix up" a bit in the political game prior to the state primaries August 4. According to him, the only fight of interest that will occur during the primaries will be that between Bristow and Curtis, in the race for the senatorial nomination of the Republican party. Senator Bristow is the man who bolted the Progressive party to join the so-called harmony movement in the Republican ranks. MacLennan concurred in a statement made by Henry Allen here some weeks ago to the effect that the

The balloon carrying the tag for the large American flag was found Friday night by Gerald Bennett of 618 North Weber street. Anyone finding the tags from the other balloons may receive the prize called for any time until Friday, July 10.

THIRTEEN DEAD, 243 HURT TOLL OF SANE FOURTH

CASUALTY LIST LOWEST ON RECORD

Property Loss Also Low, as Shown by Reports From All Parts of Country

CHICAGO, July 4.—Dead 13; injured 243.

This is the casualty list of the sanest Fourth of July celebration in the United States since the use of fireworks became popular. The property loss by fire due directly to powder-filled inventions was but $5,500; trivial when compared to the heavy damage sustained in previous years.

There were fewer deaths in the celebrations today than in any of the 16 years that records of the toll have been kept, with the exception of 1899, when but three lives were lost. But in that year the number injured was reported at 1,074, or three times that of today. Since 1899 the yearly loss suffered from fireworks has ranged from $60,790 in 1902 to $724,515 in 1909.

Casualty Lists.

As usual, fireworks were responsible for the largest number of injuries, 105. Injuries caused by toy pistols, from which tetanus frequently develops, were 58. Forty-one persons were maimed by small cannon, 30 burned by gunpowder, five were hurt by torpedoes and four in runaways. Several of the injured will die, it is believed. Six persons were killed by fireworks, four by gunpowder, two by torpedoes and one by a revolver.

These figures were compiled at midnight and are subject to revision by reports from cities not yet heard from.

Philadelphia's report of 170 injured was more than five times that of New York, which had the next largest number, and it was believed that many of those included in the list suffered from minor hurts. The casualty at Pittsburg also was high, 27, with no fatalities. In Chicago, only one person was killed and three injured slightly today. The names of two boys who died yesterday from burns received in the explosion of firewbrks they had dug from rubbish near an abandoned factory were added to the list, however.

SHORT LINE TO RUN 1 PASSENGER TODAY

Regular Train to Leave at 10:35; Will Also Move Freight During Day

Although 55 employes of the Florence & Cripple Creek railroad walked out at midnight Friday, leaving the company without an engineer, brakeman, fireman or conductor, a passenger train was operated over the road between here and Cripple Creek yesterday, leaving Colorado Springs at 8:35 o'clock in the morning and returning at 4:05 in the afternoon. The train was in charge of F. A. Dietrich, conductor; Tom Logan, engineer, and John Moore, fireman, all of whom were employed by the officials only yesterday. This was the only train over the road during the day, the regular 10:35 passenger and all freight trains being canceled.

No violence of any kind occurred in connection with the walkout. According to the officials of the company, they will take on new men as fast as possible, and today the regular 10:35 passenger will leave Colorado Springs on time. They also intend to move one freight train today.

There has been no change in the situation between the old men and the company, the latter still declaring that it will not alter its determination not to reinstate Conductor S. D. Robinson, over whose dismissal on October 9, 1913 the controversy is waged. The attitude of the men is also unchanged.

ROOSEVELT CANCELS TWO SPEAKING DATES

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 4.—Two engagements to speak to New England Progressives this month were canceled today by Colonel Roosevelt in order that he may have uninterrupted his six weeks of rest. He was to have gone to Hartford on July 23 and Boston on the following day. He probably will make speeches in those cities about the middle of August.

DR. W. B. PALMORE DYING

RICHMOND, Va., July 4.—Dr. W. B. Palmore, editor of the St. Louis (Mo.) Christian Advocate, and one of the leading men in the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was stricken with paralysis at the home of his niece, Mrs. G. W. Bright, here, tonight.

DECLARATION INDEPENDENCE OUT OF DATE?

President Wilson Says Great Document Now Should Be Modernized

DISCUSSES CURRENT ISSUES

Past 14 Months Very Trying to Nation, He Declares in Philadelphia Speech

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—The modernizing of the Declaration of Independence by applying its principles to present day business, domestic and foreign politics of America was advocated today by President Wilson in an address that thrilled a huge crowd assembled in Independence square. The president discussed Mexico, the Panama tolls repeal controversy, his antitrust program, business conditions and his ideas of modern patriotism.

President's Speech.

The president said in part:

"We are assembled today to celebrate the one hundred and thirty-eighth anniversary of the birth of the United States.

The Declaration of Independence was written in Philadelphia. It was adopted in this historic building. I have just had the privilege of sitting in the chair of the great man who presided over those whose deliberations resulted in its adoption. Here my hand rests on the table upon which the declaration was signed. We can almost feel we are in the visible and tangible presence of a great historic transaction.

What Document Means.

"But have you ever read the Declaration of Independence? When you have heard it read, have you paid attention to its sentences? The Declaration of Independence is not a Fourth of July oration. The Declaration of Independence was a document preliminary to war. It involved a vital piece of business, not a piece of rhetoric. And if you will get further down in the reading than its preliminary passages, where it quotes about the rights of men, you will see that it is a very specific body of declarations concerning the business of the day, not the business of our day—for the matter with which it deals is past—the business of revolution, the business of 1776.

"The Declaration of Independence does not mean anything to us, merely in its general statements, unless we can append to it a similarly specific body of particulars as to what we consider our liberty to consist of.

Bill of Particulars.

"We must reduce it to what the lawyers call a bill of particulars. It contains a bill of particulars—the bill of particulars of 1776—and if we are to revitalize it, we are to fill it with a bill of particulars of 1914.

"The task to which we have to address ourselves is a proof that we are worthy of the men who drew this great declaration by showing we know what they would have done in our circumstances.

"Patriotism consists of some very practical things; practical in that they belong to everyday life, in that they

FOUR KILLED IN EXPLOSION I. W. W. BOMB

Anarchists Preparing for Trial of Leaders at Tarrytown Tomorrow

RESULT COLORADO STRIKE

New York Tenement Wrecked by Blast; Plot Revealed, Declare Police

NEW YORK, July 4.—Three men and a woman were killed today when a dynamite bomb, said to be the most powerful ever used in this city, exploded with tremendous force in an apartment tenanted by Industrial Workers of the World. The upper part of the six-story tenement house, in which the bomb was being made, was wrecked.

A score of persons were seriously injured and much property damage was done in a wide radius from the scene of the explosion.

Those dead and those who escaped injury in the apartment included I. W. W. leaders, who were defendants in the trial, to be begun Monday in Tarrytown, N. Y., where they were arrested for creating a disturbance a few weeks ago. They went to the village to make demonstrations outside the Pocantico Hills estate of John D. Rockefeller, where John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had retired after being heckled in front of his office at 26 Broadway, in this city, by I. W. W. members and sympathizers, including members of Upton Sinclair's Free Silence league. Their activities here arose from the coal mine strike troubles in Colorado, where Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., has mining interests.

Police Begin Investigation.

As soon as one of the bodies of those killed in the explosion had been identified as that of Arthur Caron, who came here from Boston and who was one of the defendants in Tarrytown, the police began their investigation of the explosion on the theory that a bomb was being constructed by Caron and others for possible use at the I. W. W. hearings in Tarrytown on Monday. Since the arrest of the agitators in that village, there have been rumors of threats to town officials if the defendants were not released.

Late today the police escorted from the office of Emma Goldman's publication, Mother Earth, to a police station a group of agitators, including Marie Ganz, arrested some time ago for making outdoor speeches in which she threatened to shoot John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Miss Ganz was released this morning from the Queens county jail after serving a term as a result of her speech-making.

Agitators in Plot.

The cross examination late today disclosed that all the 11 defendants, who are out on bail, met last night with Alexander Berkman, anarchist, and others at the headquarters of the Francisco Ferrer school to devise a way to aid the persons facing trial Monday. The conferees included leaders of the so-called anti-militarist league, which seeks to dissuade workmen from joining the state national guard.

It was at the meeting, according to

STATE PROHIBITIONISTS NAME TICKET AND ADOPT PLATFORM; WOULD ENFORCE LAWS

Four Party Planks Deal With Liquor Question; Others Touch on Marriage, Divorce, Vice

In the closing session of the convention of the Colorado Prohibition party at the United Presbyterian church yesterday, Dr. S. H. Pollock of Rocky Ford was chosen as the party's candidate for governor at the next election, and was backed by a platform which declares strongly for prohibition, and which takes a definite stand on many other state questions, particularly those relating to law enforcement and the settlement of industrial disputes. The convention nominated candidates for all state offices except justice of the supreme court, and took steps toward a permanent organization of the state central committee of the party.

One Colorado Springs man, Frank J. Baker, was given a place on the ticket, being chosen as the party's nominee for attorney general. The nominees for the other offices are:

Edgar Wilkinson, Delta, lieutenant governor.

Henry Candlin, Greeley, secretary of state.

Fred White, Boulder, auditor.

G. G. Phillip, Fort Lupton, treasurer.

Mrs. J. M. Gallup, Pueblo, and A. Perkins, Sterling, regents of the state university.

The Rev. J. Fred White, Arvada, and Judge W. A. Marsh, Grand Junction, congressmen-at-large.

J. A. Cochran, Longmont, congressman from the First district.

The Rev. George H. Stuntz, Colorado City, congressman from the Second district.

Mrs. Hattie Lowthian, Denver, superintendent of public instruction.

The committee on a permanent organization for the state central committee is composed of Dr. F. C. Chamberlain, Colorado Springs; the Rev. George H. Stuntz, Colorado City; H. N. Seyler, Dr. T. E. Taylor and John Hipp, Denver; J. A. Cochran, Longmont, and the Rev. J. H. Ketchum, Goldfield.

Platform Has Fourteen Planks.

The platform adopted consists of 14 planks, four of which deal with questions relating to prohibition. Three others deal with law enforcement and industrial disputes, the convention declaring for the strict enforcement of laws, for the enactment of necessary legislation to enable state officers to enforce the laws where local officials fail to do so, for the complete suppression of all violation of law by both employers and employes, for the right of the state to engage in supplying the citizens of the state with the necessities of life when those engaged in their production fail to do so, or only furnish them at an exorbitant cost, and for courts of arbitration for industrial disputes.

The convention also took a stand for

UNCLE SAM SOON TO ERECT ARMOR PLANT

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The first step toward the construction of a government armor plate plant, to manufacture the vast amount of armor used in the building of the nation's battleships is provided for in the naval appropriation bill. This bill authorizes the creation of a committee to investigate and report upon plans for building an armor plate factory to be operated by Uncle Sam.

The idea is largely that of Secretary of the Navy Daniels, who became convinced soon after he went into office that the United States would save a large amount of money yearly were it to make its own armor plate. Mr. Daniels became convinced that in the past high prices have been paid to the "armor plate trust" and that the best way to break the alleged trust was to have Uncle Sam go into competition with it. The Daniels suggestion was taken up in congress and finally crystallized to the extent that a section was inserted in the annual naval budget providing for a try-out of the plan.

House and Senate Agree.

This provision of the naval budget was recently agreed to by the house and senate conferees in charge of the naval appropriation bill and was [illegible] approved by the two houses. [illegible] The committee is duly created, therefore, and probably will get down to work in a few weeks to [illegible] [illegible] upon it. The section creating the committee reads:

"A committee is hereby appointed, to consist of the chairman of the committee on naval affairs of the senate and the chairman of the house of representatives and one naval officer to be selected by the secretary of the navy, to investigate and report, at the next regular session of congress, upon the cost of erection of an armor plant to enable the United States to manufacture its own armor plate and projectiles [illegible] steel capable of [illegible] all ballistic and other [illegible] required for use in the vessels of the navy at the lowest possible [illegible], as to the [illegible], taking into consideration all of the elements [illegible] for the economical and successful [illegible] of such a plant.

Full Report Asked.

"Said report shall contain the estimated cost of a plant and site [illegible] to secure [illegible] a plant having an annual output [illegible] of 20,000 tons, and also a plant having an output of 10,000 tons; as also an [illegible] of the [illegible] cost of the necessary buildings, machinery and [illegible] for such, and the estimated annual cost of the maintenance of [illegible] the [illegible] cost of the finished product.

"Said committee is authorized to sit during the recess of congress, to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] by [illegible] out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the expenses of said committee."

Under the provisions of this section of the naval bill the members of the investigating committee will be Senator Benjamin R. Tillman of South Carolina and Representative [illegible] P. Padgett of Tennessee, [illegible] of the senate and house [illegible] naval [illegible].

To Select Site.

The third member of the select committee is yet to be named by the secretary of the navy.

One of the important duties of the committee will be to probe the availability of various sites proposed for the location of the plant. There is a strong [illegible] among a number of congressmen [illegible] believe they should have [illegible] facts and more than a [illegible] of [illegible] have been interested [illegible]

Splendid Medicine Stomach Trouble

I Suffered for Several Years Peruna Restored My Health

Mrs. Elizabeth Reuther, No. 503 Twelfth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "I am pleased to endorse Peruna as a splendid medicine for catarrh and stomach trouble, from which I suffered for several years. I took it for several months and at the end of that time found my health was restored and have felt splendidly ever since. I now take it when I contract a cold and it soon rids the system of any catarrhal tendencies.

Over Ten Years Ago.

"I would not be without Peruna! Although it was over ten years ago that I first gave you my testimonial, I am of the same opinion as when I wrote it, and give you the privilege to use it as you see fit. I still use Peruna when I think it necessary. I am recommending it to my neighbors whenever a chance occurs."

I Still Praise Peruna.

Peruna is undoubtedly a splendid medicine for the stomach. A great many people after years of searching for a remedy, finally try Peruna and are cured. This remedy is especially helpful in cases of weakness of the stomach. Those who prefer to take tablets instead of liquid medicines can get Peruna Tablets.

SUNDAY COMPETES WITH YOUNG AMERICA; HOLDS 2 SERVICES ON FOURTH

Sunday a Rancher, Too.

"Yes, he's a farmer," Rodeheaver explained, pointing to Sunday. "He raises apples at Hood River, Ore. He hasn't got any apples with him, he expects to [illegible]."

Out-of-town people were asked to rise, though no arrangements had been made for the delegations. About one-third of the audience proved to be residents of other states.

Sunday spoke last night on "Seek Ye the Lord," taking his text from Isaiah 55:6-7: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."

"That chapter is God's call to salvation," Sunday said in beginning his talk. The sermon was Sunday's call to salvation. It lacked full force because of the numerous disturbances, but it went home to many. In the sermon the evangelist reiterated many of the ideas expressed in previous talks. Especially was this noticeable in his remarks on hypocrites. He characterized those who refuse to join the church because there are hypocrites on the rolls. "Tell God and you'll see a thousand hypocrites outside the church where there is only one in it," was Sunday's particular shot.

What People Strive For.

The evangelist spoke of what men and women seek—health, wealth, pleasure, gratification of ambitions—in detail. In it, he sought to some extent on Colorado Springs as a health resort. The local reference served to impress more firmly his conclusions to be drawn, and also showed how Sunday takes advantage of everything to add force to his sermons. He invariably uses up-to-the-minute examples, referring in his remarks to what extent man will go to recover his health to the recent [illegible] half-way across the continent on a special train of C. W. Post.

"Not all seeking health find it, not all seeking wealth find it, not all seeking pleasure find it, not all seeking gratification of their ambitions find it—but everybody seeking God finds salvation," he concluded. "No one ever sought God and didn't find him. And the greatest joy ever known will come if you do accept Jesus."

Sunday launched immediately into his peculiar prayer:

"Well, Lord, thank you. Four weeks ago we came to Colorado Springs; four weeks ago we stepped off the Denver and Rio Grande train and came up to Boulder Crescent, where we were told we were to live during our stay here. We came over to the tabernacle that night and as we looked around we said:

"From this platform I will preach for five weeks. All these seats out there that are now vacant will be filled with people who will come to hear the gospel. The seats in the choir loft will be filled with singers. 'Rody' will stand here and lead the choir and Ackley will sit there at the piano and play. People will join Miss Saxe's Bible class and will attend all the special meetings. Hundreds will flock down the aisles to accept Jesus. The newspapermen will sit in the boxes to the right and the left of me and preach the gospel through their papers; preach to the people in cold type what I preach here.'

Has Done His Best.

"We have been here four weeks, Lord, and we have tried to do our best. There is still one week left, for we promised to remain in this Pikes Peak region five weeks. Beginning tomorrow we begin our last week, and, Lord, we hope it will be our best week."

Sunday then prayed for the meeting being conducted, prayed that many converts would come; that many would realize the need of Jesus. Finishing, he turned to the day:

"We think on that cold, bleak, rocky New England coast years ago the greatest drama of all ages was enacted, Lord. There was laid the foundation of our nation and we feel proud to do honor to her today. We thank you, Lord, for coming to the world and to us to set us free."

With eyes still closed, he stopped long enough to ask the people to rise. Then he finished his prayer with a few words and extended his invitation. Frank Farmer of Denver sang at last night's service, as did Mrs. H. H. Seldomridge, who was accompanied by the chorus. Mr. Farmer will sing again today.

Yesterday afternoon Sunday preached on "Faith," taking his text from Matthew 17:20: "If ye have faith so much as a grain of mustard seed ye shall say unto this mountain, remove hence unto yonder place, and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you."

The evangelist emphasized the meaning of faith, saying it is absolutely imperative to a Christian life. "Faith," he said, "is an assurance that what God says is true." And he related numerous examples of faith to bring out his point.

No other invitation than through the press will be extended to the pioneers of the city. All are cordially invited to attend.

The cottage prayer meeting to be held at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, 808 North Cascade avenue, will be led by Mr. Rodeheaver. Mrs. Asher will sing. Neighboring districts are invited.

CARRANZA IS CHIEF; VILLA ARMY LEADER

Delegates Reach Agreement at Torreon for Settlement of Controversy

TORREON, Mexico, July 4.—That General Venustiano Carranza is the chief of the Constitutionalist forces and Gen. Francisco Villa is chief of the north was the preliminary agreement arrived at today by the joint commission of the divisions of the north and northeast in session here to consider and adjust the situation created by General Carranza's refusal to supply the coal and ammunition needed by General Villa to continue his campaign on Mexico City. This is regarded the basis on which future negotiations will be conducted by the conference.

The opinion prevailed here that in the future General Villa would not be hampered in his military operations and would have the full support of the Constitutionalist national government. It is understood that this is the only condition General Villa has insisted upon.

George C. Carothers, confidential agent of the United States government, had a long interview at noon today with General Villa, and afterward said that it had been eminently satisfactory.

Reach Basis of Adjustment.

Roque Gonzales Garza, one of Villa's officials, and Meade Fierro, a Carranza man, who are acting as secretaries of the conference, issued the following statement:

"In today's session the following was agreed to and approved as the basis of future findings: The division of the north recognizes Venustiano Carranza in all things as commander-in-chief of the Constitutionalist army, and General Villa solemnly reiterates his loyalty. General Francisco Villa will continue as commander of the division of the north."

The delegates of the northeast are the guests of General Villa. They were entertained last night at Villa's residence.

"We are all patriots," said General Villa to his guests. "And we should have the good of our country at heart and to do our whole duty as good Mexicans should."

Gen. Luis Caballero, governor of the state of Tamaulipas, is one of the members of the conference.

British India, a writer in the Outlook for the Blind says, leads all eastern countries in the number of its blind people, containing about 600,000. In China there are, it is estimated, 500,000; in Japan 100,000 and in Egypt 150,000 of these unfortunates.

FOUR PERSONS SUSPECTED OF THE BAILEY MURDER

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 4.—District Attorney Smith tonight announced that after a hard day's work the scope of his investigations had so far broadened that he has three women and one man under surveillance on suspicion of having shot Mrs. Louise Bailey to death as she stood in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman last Tuesday night.

All the women are patients of the physician, the prosecutor said. The man is a resident of Freeport.

Mr. Smith would not give the names of any of the new suspects.

Immediately after making the announcement about additional suspects, District Attorney Smith ordered Sheriff Petit to place more detectives on guard about the Carman home and gave instructions to the local police to send more for duty there also.

FOLLOWING THE SUNDAY PARTY

No less than 100 neighborhood Bible classes will be formed before the Sunday campaign is concluded, in the opinion of Miss Grace Saxe who has the work in charge. Miss Saxe outlined the work at her Bible class meeting at the tabernacle last Wednesday and about 75 classes were formed immediately.

The Colorado Springs High school girls have elected Miss Winifred Hanta president and Miss Frances Spencer secretary of the High School Bible class, organized by Miss Saxe. Manitou and Colorado City high schools also will organize classes.

Frank Farmer of Denver will sing at the tabernacle services today. Mr. Farmer recently brought his Temple male quartet from Denver to sing at the service attended by the Denver delegation.

Collections will be taken at all three services today. The amount raised by pledges last Sunday was not sufficient to cover all current expenses, the finance committee estimating the amount that would be needed exclusive of today's collections.

Billy Sunday will speak to El Paso county pioneers Tuesday morning at 9:45 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. W. Price, 215 South Cascade avenue.

"'It's a great school.'

Crew of Wrecked Ship Rescued From Barren Island After 4 Months

ON BOARD U. S. S. CALIFORNIA, July 3.—(By wireless to San Diego, Cal., July 4.)—The cruiser Cleveland returned to Acapulco today from Clipperton island, which she left June 25, having on board Captain Jensen, his wife, two children, the first and second officers, the cook and six seamen of the American schooner Nokomis of San Francisco which was wrecked on a treacherous coral reef at 1 o'clock in the morning of February 28. The castaways were cared for by the inhabitants of the island who number only 30, until a growing shortage in the necessaries of life made a trip to the mainland imperative.

Two volunteers undertook the voyage of 670 miles to Acapulco and accomplished it safely. Owing to the disorganization of commerce wrought by civil war, no assistance from the Mexicans could be had, and it was necessary to dispatch a man-o'-war. The Cleveland was assigned to the rescue and carried supplies for the islanders as well as brought back the castaways.

Those rescued are: Captain Jensen, Mrs. Jensen, two children; Mates Helverson and Hansen; Seamen Oliver, Hendrickson, Halverson, Miller, Dockeyman and Brown, and Cook Knowles. All are now on board the Pacific Mail liner City of Sidney bound for San Francisco.

DECLARATION INDEPENDENCE OUT OF DATE?

belong to no extraordinary distinction but to those things which are associated with our everyday commonplace duty. There are some gentlemen in Washington, for example, who are showing themselves to be patriotic in a way that does not attract very much attention. The members of the house and senate, who stay in hot Washington to maintain a quorum of the houses and transact public business, are performing an act of patriotism. I honor them for it, and I am mightily glad to stay there and stick by them until it is over.

Need of Patriotism.

"It is patriotic also to know what the facts are and to face them with candor. I have heard a great many facts stated about the present business conditions in this country, for example, a great many allegations of facts at any rate, and it is strange that these facts as stated do not tally with each other.

"Now the truth always matches the truth and when I find gentlemen insisting that everything is going wrong, when it is demonstrable that most things are going right, I wonder what they are trying to do. Are they trying to serve the country, or are they trying to serve something smaller than the country? Are they trying to put hope into the hearts of men who work and toil every day, or rather are they putting discouragement and despair into these hearts? If they love America and anything is wrong, it is their duty to put their hands to the task of setting it right.

Wilson's Experiences.

"I have had some experiences in the last 14 months which have not been entirely refreshing. It was universally admitted that the banking system of the country needed reorganization. We set the best minds we could find to the task of discovering the best methods of reorganization. We met with hardly anything but criticism from the bankers of this country. And yet, just as soon as that act was passed, on the very next day there was an universal chorus of applause from the bankers of the United States. Now, if it was wrong the day before it was passed, why was it right the day after it was passed? Where had been the candor of criticism by the concert of counsel which makes a great nation successful? It is not patriotic to concert measures against one another; it is not patriotic to concert measures from one another.

"You know the Declaration of Independence has in one sense lost its significance. Nobody believed we would be independent when that document was written; now nobody would dare to doubt we are independent. But it is one thing to be independent and it is another thing to know what to do with your independence. It is one thing to come to your majority and another thing to know what you are going to do with your life and your energies.

Limit to Diplomacy.

"One of the most serious questions for sober-minded men to address themselves to in these United States is what we are going to do with the influence and power of this great nation. Are we going to play the old role of using that power for our own aggrandizement and material benefit?

"The department of state of the United States is constantly called upon to back up commercial enterprises and the industrial enterprises of the United States in foreign countries, and it at once time went so far in that direction that all its diplomacy was designated as 'dollar diplomacy.' It was for supporting every man who wanted to earn anything anywhere if he was an American. Now there is a limit to that. There is no man more interested than I am in carrying the enterprises of the United States all over the world.

"But there is a limit to that which has laid upon us more than any other nation in the world. We set up this nation, and we proposed to set it up on the rights of man. We did not name any differences between one race and another; we did not set up any barriers against any particular race or people, but opened our gates to the world and said all men who wish to be free come to us and they will be welcome. We said this independence is not merely for us—a selfish thing for our own private use—but for everybody to whom we can find the means of extending it.

Refers to Mexican Question.

"Now, we cannot, with that faith taken in our youth, we cannot with that great idea set before us when we were young, and practically only a scant 3,000,000 people take upon ourselves, now that we are 100,000,000, any other conception of duty than what we entertained at that time. So, if American enterprise in foreign countries, particularly in those foreign countries which are not strong enough to resist us, takes that shape of imposing upon and exploiting the mass of the people in that country it ought to be put to a stop, not encouraged.

"I am willing to get anything for an American that money can buy, except the rights of other men. I will not help any man buy a power he should not exercise over his fellow being. You know what a big question there is in Mexico. Eighty-five per cent of the Mexican people have never been allowed to have a look in in regard to their government and the rights which have been exercised by the other 15 per cent. Do you suppose that circumstance is not sometimes in my thought? I know the American people have a heart that will beat just as strong for those millions in Mexico as it will beat for any other millions anywhere else in the world, and when they once know what is at stake in Mexico they will know what ought to be done in Mexico.

Generosity of Americans.

"You hear a great deal stated about the property loss in Mexico, and I deplore it with all my heart. Upon the conclusion of the present disturbed condition in Mexico, undoubtedly those who have lost properties ought to be compensated.

Man's individual rights have met with many deplorable circumstances, but back of it all is the struggle of the people, and while we think of the one in the foreground, let us not forget the other in the background. Every patriotic American is a man who is not niggardly and selfish in the things he needs that make for human liberty and the rights of man, but wants to share it with the whole world. And he is never so proud of the great flag as when it means for other people, as well as for himself, the symbol of liberty and freedom. I would be ashamed of this flag if it ever did anything outside of America that we would not permit it to do inside of America.

"The world is becoming more complicated every day. Therefore, no man ought to be foolish enough to think he understands it; and that is the reason why I am so glad to know there are some simple things in the world. One of these simple things is principle.

Honesty Is Simple Thing.

"Honesty is a perfectly simple thing. It is hard for me to believe, under most circumstances, when a man has to choose between two ways that he does not know which is the right way and which is the wrong way. And no man who has chosen the wrong way ought even to come into Independence square; he ought to be put out of Independence square. That is not where he belongs.

"So I say it is patriotic sometimes to regard the honor of this country in preference to its material interests. Would you rather be despised by all the nations of the world as incapable of keeping your treaty obligations, or would you rather have free tolls for American ships? The treaty may have been a mistake, but its meaning was unmistakable. When I have made a promise as a man I try to keep it. The most honorable and distinguished nation in the world is the nation that can keep its promises to its own hurt. I want to say, parenthetically, that I don't think anybody was hurt. I am not enthusiastic for subsidies to a monopoly and nobody can get me enthusiastic on that subject. But, assuming that was a matter of enthusiasm, I am much more enthusiastic for keeping the integrity of the United States absolutely unquestioned and unsullied.

Popularity vs. Patriotism.

"Popularity is not always successful patriotism. The most patriotic man is sometimes the man who goes in the direction in which he thinks he is right, whether or not he thinks anybody agrees with him, because it is patriotic to sacrifice yourself if you think you are right.

"Every idea has got to be started by somebody, and it is a lonely thing to start anything. Yet, you have got to start it if there is any man's blood in you, and if you love the country that you are pretending to work for. I am sometimes very much interested in seeing gentlemen supposing that popularity is the way to success in America. The way to success in America is to show that you are not afraid of anybody except God and his judgment. If I did not believe that I would not believe in democracy. If I did not believe that I would not believe people would govern themselves. If I did not believe that the moral judgment would be the last and final judgment in the minds of men, as well as at the tribunal of God, I could not believe in popular government. But I do believe these things, and therefore I earnestly believe in the democracy not only of America, but in the power of an awakened people to govern and control its own affairs.

Dream of the Future.

"And my dream is this, that as the years go on and the world knows more and more of America, it also will bring out this fountain of youth and renewal; that it will also turn to America for those moral inspirations that lie in the base of human freedom; that it will never fear America unless it finds itself engaged in some enterprise consistent with the rights of humanity; that America will come to that day when all shall know she puts human rights above all other rights, and that her flag is the flag not only of America, but the flag of humanity.

"What other great people, I ask, has devoted itself to this exalted ideal? To what other nation in the world can you look for instant sympathy that thrills the whole body politic when men anywhere are fighting for their rights?

"I don't know that there ever will be another declaration of independence, a statement of grievances of mankind; but I believe if any such document is ever drawn it will be drawn in the spirit of the American Declaration of Independence, and that America has lifted the light that will shine unto all generations and guide the feet of mankind to the goal of justice, liberty and peace."

EDUCATORS DISCUSS STRIKE SITUATION IN COLORADO DISTRICT

BOULDER, July 4.—"Property that respects human life need never be defended by the militia," asserted Prof. Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago, today, before the University of Colorado's sociological conference.

Professor Henderson outlined "a social program for state and nation," after a futile effort had been made to put the conference on record with regard to industrial conditions in Colorado.

There was an extended discussion of the Colorado coal strike, but it was decided that the conference should not adopt any resolutions without evidence from participants in the struggle.

Lays Down Three Principles.

Professor Henderson indicated three principles as necessary for the improvement of social and economic conditions. They were:

"First—Title to property must be recognized as a social trust.

"Second—Disease and ignorance must be banished as far as possible in order that the numbers of the unfit be reduced.

"Third—The labor market must be organized.

"The essential principle of organized society," he said, "is the assertion of law, the sanctity of law. As a people we do believe in law and order, although sometimes we forget ourselves.

Nation Still Sound.

"I have seen mobs and riots, disorder and bloodshed, but after all the nation is sound. It believes in law. It believes in its courts. It believes in its government."

Professor Henderson argued for laws giving protection against occupational diseases. He declared that appalling numbers of lives are lost in factories and mines and on the railroads from preventable causes.

In the discussion which preceded the address, Prof. F. A. Bushee, head of the department of sociology of the University of Colorado, suggested that a good way to reach an understanding of the industrial situation in Colorado would be for each side to prepare an argument for the other.

"As long as you understand only your own point of view you cannot understand the situation," he said.

UNCLE SAM'S BOYS OBSERVE FOURTH IN FAR-OFF VERA CRUZ

VERA CRUZ, July 4.—The United States navy vanquished the army and marine corps today in a long program of athletic sports which marked their celebration of the Fourth of July on Mexican soil. Hundreds of natives witnessed the events and saw the navy carry off the honors.

During the Roman race of the cavalry a native woman standing in front of the galloping teams after they had crossed the finishing line, became panic-stricken and was unable to move as the horses approached her. The driver of the first team, unable to stop his horses, forced them apart and the animals passed on each side of the woman at full gallop with the rider straddling across the space between the saddles. The woman was untouched and thousands of soldiers and sailors looking on at the daring feat, cheered the rider.

Promptly at noon cannon from the ships and shore thundered a national salute of 21 guns to which the foreign warships in the harbor replied gun for gun.

FOURTH NOT CELEBRATED IN THE MEXICAN CAPITAL FOR FIRST TIME IN YEARS

MEXICO CITY, July 4.—For the first time since the Spanish-American war, no public celebration of the Fourth of July was held in this city. The American residents spent the day quietly. Several of them appeared in the streets wearing American flags in their coat lapels. They were not molested, but their action was adversely criticised by a majority of the American colony who deemed it unwise and likely to precipitate trouble.

The American club held a quiet reception and patriotic addresses were delivered. The parlors were decorated with American flags but none were displayed on the outside of the building.

The Brazilian minister, who has charge of American interests here, held a reception at the legation tonight in honor of the Fourth. Many Americans called.

Querido Moheno, whose resignation as minister of commerce and industry was accepted by President Huerta yesterday, left for Puerto Mexico tonight.

General Blanquet, minister of war, says that the government is prepared to suppress any disturbance at the elections tomorrow.

General Blanquet denies that he will resign.

Gen. Kelley's Army Reaches Capital After Long Hike

WASHINGTON, July 4.—"General" Kelley's army of unemployed, which made its way from the Pacific coast by foot and rail and which has been encamped on the Virginia side of the Potomac river for the last week, today stole quietly into Washington.

It marched up Pennsylvania avenue to the Capitol and on the steps of the main entrance held sway for 15 minutes before being detected by the police. Permission to speak from the steps of the Capitol previously had been refused by Vice President Marshall. "Colonel" Charles McLennan, commanding officer, was interrupted during his denunciation of the present form of government, taken into custody, but was not locked up. His assurances that the "army" would retreat from the Capitol grounds gained him freedom.

A young man had decided to join the Episcopal church, but his family were all Baptists, so he thought he should be immersed when baptized, and on going to the rector of the Episcopal church he made a request for such a baptism. The rector decided that it could be quite easily accomplished and would speak to the Baptist minister about it.

The Baptist minister, on hearing this, was quite delighted and readily agreed to baptize and take the young man into the church the following Sunday morning, but said the rector: "He just wants you to baptize him and he wants to join my church."

The good Baptist minister then replied by saying: "We do all our own washing, but we don't take in other people's washing."

GERMAN SOFAS ARE SACRED

From the Cleveland News.

In Germany the sofa is invested with a sanctity as of a throne. The visitor must not sit on it unless especially invited to do so by the hostess. To take a seat there unasked is an outrageous presumption.

CABBAGE ANATOMY

A well-known expert in cooking encountered trouble in a suburban community the other afternoon when she prepared to lecture to the Mothers club. Her subject was "How to Cook." She began by telling how much a man appreciates good cooking, and then she proposed to give various recipes.

Among the first was one for cold slaw. "To have this best," began the lecturer, "take a good hearted cabbage and—"

At this point a young matron interrupted. She was eager to get all the information possible. "Tell me, please," she spoke up, "how is one to know the disposition of a cabbage?"

MINER SAYS BUTTE MAYOR STARTED ROW

Declares He Was Shot Before He Stabbed City Official in Latter's Office

BUTTE, Mont., July 4.—Eric Lantala, the Finnish miner, who stabbed [illegible] J. Duncan, mayor of Butte, three times and who was shot by the mayor, affirmed today that the mayor started the fight.

Lantala said he feared he would die from his wound.

"The mayor shot me first," he said, from his hospital bed.

"Why did you go to see the mayor?" he was asked.

"I asked him to talk at a picnic my countrymen are going to give tomorrow. The mayor did not understand me, and when I started to repeat the question, he shot me."

Lantala said he thereupon drew his knife and stabbed the mayor.

The version heretofore given of the affair is that Lantala demanded the expulsion from Butte of Frank Altonen, correspondent of a Hancock, Mich., paper, in accordance with a resolution by a Finnish miners' meeting, and rejected by the mayor. When the mayor told Lantala he could not act, it was stated, the miner started the attack.

Because of poor attendance, President McDonald of the newly-formed Butte Mine Workers union postponed until July 19 a meeting of the organization set for today and posted a bulletin to that effect.

J. E. Bradley, vice president, and some members of the executive board said this action exceeded the president's authority and went ahead with the meeting. About 100 persons attended, it was said, and heard a reading of the proposed by-laws and constitution.

TURKS CAPTURE GREEK VESSEL; DROWN PASSENGERS

ATHENS, July 4.—The Athens papers publish dispatches from Chios, an island in the Aegean, stating that a Turkish destroyer on July 3 bombarded and captured a Greek sailing ship which was transporting refugees to Chios. The same destroyer proceeded to Gouni islet and bombarded and destroyed a monastery.

According to these dispatches, fishermen at Tchesme, a seaport of Asia Minor, opposite Chios, declared they saw the captured transport, but without passengers, whom they allege the Turks drowned.

MINISTER WILLIAMS IS ASKED TO RESIGN

Gets 'In Bad' by Talking Too Much on Situation in the Balkans

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—President Wilson has requested the resignation of George Frederick Williams, American minister to Greece and Montenegro, as a result of Mr. William's public statement regarding the situation in Albania. This became known following the president's arrival here today.

Mr. Williams' own representation of his statements were taken up at the cabinet meeting yesterday and afterward Mr. Wilson decided their effect was such that it would be improper for Mr. Williams to longer represent the United States in the Balkans.

It has been understood that Mr. Williams of his own accord, had forwarded his resignation, but so far as could be learned here, it has not been received by the president.

Has Stormy Career.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The term of George Fred Williams as minister to Greece and Montenegro has been brief, but has attracted much attention. A few weeks ago President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and other officials were amazed by a published report that Mr. Williams had circularized the powers, offering his services as a mediator in the Albanian crisis. State department officials then said the minister had no authority to do so, but had been given permission to visit Epirus and make a report on conditions. Secretary Bryan called for a report on the incident and Mr. Williams replied he was sending one by mail. While there is no confirmation here, it is believed in official circles that the minister's resignation is accompanying that report.

The concern of administration officials was increased recently by publication of a further attack on the Albanian situation, the part of the European powers and the rule of Prince William attributed to that minister. So far as is known the powers have made no representations to Washington over the minister's activities, but officials would not have been surprised if they had.

GOVERNOR HAYS, SPEEDING EAST ABOARD SPECIAL, SENDS GREETING TO SPRINGS

Arkansas Executive Declares Stay in Pikes Peak Region Will Always Be Remembered

Gov. George W. Hays of Arkansas, who spent a day and a half in the Pike's Peak region and Colorado Springs last week, was so well pleased with everybody and everything he saw here that he has written a letter of thanks to The Gazette expressing his sentiments in the matter. The letter was written aboard the special car in which Governor Hays was traveling and was mailed just before the travelers left Colorado. Governor Hays expresses his thanks to The Gazette for the courtesies extended the party, both by the paper and the citizens of Colorado Springs. The letter follows:

Thinks Colorado Wonderful

On Board Missouri Pacific Train No. 2,
July 2, 1914.

The Colorado Springs Gazette:

In leaving your state and returning to the great commonwealth which has honored me with the position of chief executive, I wish to return to you on behalf of the Arkansas delegation which today visited your city, and the entire citizenship of Arkansas, and through you to Governor Ammons, Mayor McKesson, Leonard Curtis, A. W. Henderson and other citizens, my profound gratitude for the courtesies shown us during our stay in your magnificent city. I wish to say that through the courtesy of your citizens we have been permitted to scale Pikes Peak, to ride through the Garden of the Gods and the beautiful Cheyenne canon; we have had the privilege of meeting many of your citizens and in shaking hands with them we have felt the warm throb of the heart that beats brotherly feeling, which makes us feel that we are one people, living under one flag; and for all of this our admiration excels our fondest dreams.

We are also extremely grateful to J. H. Stubbs of Conway, Ark., one of our best citizens, who is now living with you, we trust but temporarily; M. E. Stubbs—and it is a charming coincidence—secretary of your B. P. O. E. lodge No. 309; A. J. Lawton, commissioner of public works and property; Leonard Curtis of the state highway commission; H. C. Chapman of the Giles Mercantile agency; C. P. Stephens, James P. Busser, C. J. Heath, President J. A. Hayes of the First National bank; W. C. Dotterer, John A. Mitchell of Pueblo and J. L. Terry of Denver, general superintendent of the Denver, Laramie & Northwestern railroad, for the courtesies shown us.

Arkansas Also Some State.

We are especially grateful to the mayor and others whose names I do not recall for kindnesses shown us. Colorado is certainly the front yard of the garden spot of the world. I wish to say that our people hail from a state of peace and prosperity, sunshine and flowers, of cotton, rice and corn, and one that is unequaled in natural resources. Our land is as rich and productive as that in any part of the world. We have inexhaustible supplies of timber, coal, minerals, the only diamond field on the western continent; mines that supply the aluminum of our country; a state where every variety of vegetable and fruit is raised, those of the temperate zone and the semitropical countries, the greatest apple country in the world, the world's peach basket, and inhabited by a great citizenship.

Governor Hay's Platform.

We believe in that declaration as announced by the fathers—equal rights to all, special privileges to none. We represent a progressive people who are developing the great resources of our state. We are dealing justly with every legitimate interest of our state. We encourage capital to come to Arkansas for investment in order that we may have more and better railroad facilities, more manufactures and other industries, all of which will advance the interests of our state and give to labor employment, and at the same time protect the capital that enables our state to utilize its splendid labor—the expert and the man whose pay is by the week or month, and not by the hour.

In other words, the motto of Arkansas is "A square deal to the citizenship of the state, to the railroads and all other corporations—all legitimate interests." We know that individuals and corporations will be protected by the just and equitable laws of Arkansas, and we know that labor will be liberally and equitably dealt with, giving it is deserved, and, just reward; and at the same time we know that corporations and other industries will be dealt with in the same impartial and equitable manner.

PASSING OF U. S. EXPRESS COMPANY MEANS ADDED FACILITIES TO OTHER COMPANIES

New President of American Outlines How It Will Affect Shipping Interests

With the actual retirement July 1 of the United States Express company, shippers all over the country will be greatly interested in noting the effect the rearrangement of contracts with the three large companies will have on routing of shipments. Now that all roads that were operated by the United States Express company have arranged their operating contracts with other express companies, it may be interesting to shippers to note what these new connections mean.

The D. L. & W., together with the Pere Marquette has been taken over by the Adams Express company, while the B. & O., together with the 'Frisco system, has been acquired by Wells Fargo.

All other lines operated by the United States Express company will be occupied by the American Express company. These include the Rock Island system with a total mileage of over 8,000 miles, the Lehigh Valley R. R., 1,451 miles, Central R. R., 676 miles, and Philadelphia & Reading, 1,500 miles. These roads, together with their subsidiary lines, give the American Express company nearly 14,000 miles of railroad lines, making a total of 74,000 miles operated exclusively by the American Express company, which will maintain more than 10,000 offices.

The importance of this change in the express operating map becomes more apparent when shippers appreciate that it gives the American company direct routings to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington with new southern and western connections.

This company will have its own direct lines from Philadelphia to Buffalo over the P. & R. and Lehigh Valley lines, connecting at Buffalo with its other lines, the L. S. & M. S., Michigan Central, N. Y. Chicago & St. Louis, C. C., C. & St. Louis and Grand Trunk.

By the acquisition of the Rock Island lines the company will extend its service to Santa Rosa, N. M., Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Denver, Colo., St. Joseph, Mo., Atchison and Leavenworth, Kan., Burlington and Keokuk, Ia., Omaha, Neb., St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., over that road.

A study of the new map of the company which has just been issued shows that by the acquisition of these new roads the American Express company has greatly improved its facilities.

George C. Taylor, the new president of the company, stated that it will be his policy to extend the same high standard of service throughout the new lines that obtained at other points and territory.

NOVEMBER BALLOT PUTS BILLS UP TO THE PEOPLE

Eight State Officials, Six Referred and Eight Initiative, Acts are to Be Voted on

Eight state officers, six referred measures, three constitutional amendments and eight initiative measures are to be voted on at the November election. One of the referred measures, the public utilities bill, may be striken from the ballot, leaving sixteen. Three referred bills relate to the public utilities bill, one referring the entire bill, another sections 35, 36 and 37, and a third pertains only to section 36. These three sections confer upon the commission the power to regulate construction, sale, lease, incumbrance or consolidation of property of public utility concerns, and give control to the commission of the issue of any stock or securities of public utility corporations. They also provide for an accounting of stock sales.

Violation Is Made a Penalty.

Violation of the provisions is made a felony.

Another referred measure is the "commission merchants' bill," which provides for the licensing and bonding of commission merchants and regulations for the conduct of the business.

The deputy sheriffs' bill, referred at the instance of the mine operators, forbids the appointment of deputy sheriffs or other peace officers who have not been residents of the state for one year; makes the private employment of a deputy a felony, and permits damage suits against any corporation unlawfully employing deputies.

The remaining referred bill was designed to relieve employes and workmen from assuming the risk of injury or death and allowing for damages.

The three constitutional amendments placed on the ballot at the instance of the state legislature, concern the cost of publishing initiated measures, providing greater power for the state board of equalization, and regulate the rights of towns to incur debt.

Besides regulating the method for publishing initiated measures, the first act provides that the general assembly shall have no power to propose amendments to more than six articles of the constitution at the same session, and that measures on the ballot shall be placed thereon in the order which they were filed with the secretary of state.

New Powers for Equalization Board.

The state board of equalization is granted additional powers in that it may lower or increase individual assessments, instead of being limited to flat increase or decrease in each county, as now provided.

The town debt act requires that no indebtedness may be contracted without an act passed by the council and ratified by votes of the people.

The first of the initiative measures to go on the ballot was filed last February and asks that newspapers be made a public utility. The remaining seven petitions were filed within the last six weeks. In the order of the filing they are:

Good roads bill, providing for a half mill levy.
The adult probation bill.
The jury reform measure.
The child welfare bill.
Special election act.
State-wide prohibition act.

A number of petitions failed of enough signatures or were not received for filing within the time required by law. These included petitions for a law permitting the mining of coal lands by the state, increase of the term of county assessors and county judges, with an increase of salary, and acts for the division of counties and to abolish the state tax commission.

Dr. Alden came to Colorado less than two months ago, but already centers of the organization have been formed in this city and in Pueblo. The association has received a special invitation to attend the Panama-Pacific exposition next year, and it is expected that it will be well represented in the convention hall.

SWELTERING EAST HEARS DAILY OF COOL COLORADO

Fine Weather in Pikes Peak Region Advertised by Railroads in Special Bulletin

While the east is sweltering in the grip of excessive temperatures, and those residents of that section who can afford it are seeking cool spots in which to recover from the effects of the long heated term, the fact that "It Is a Privilege to Live in Colorado" is being set forth in a novel way by the display in railroad ticket offices throughout the eastern and middle states of daily bulletins giving the temperature in Colorado Springs, Denver, Pueblo and Salt Lake City, and many of the summer resorts in this state and Utah.

The plan is credited to Frank A. Wadleigh, passenger traffic manager of the Rio Grande, who has caused these bulletins to be placed in the windows of offices of eastern lines in Kansas City, Omaha, Chicago, Cincinnati, New York and other centers as well as smaller towns in Oklahoma, and Texas. Each morning the temperatures at 8 o'clock in such resorts as Glenwood Springs, Manitou, Colorado Springs, Wagon Wheel Gap, Palmer Lake and Pagosa Springs are wired to Chicago, Omaha and Kansas City and thence distributed by the Burlington, Rock Island and Missouri Pacific in all cities where local ticket agents are stationed. The bulletin sheet is headed with this line "It is Cool in the Rockies" and at the bottom is printed another reading "Sunstroke and malaria are unknown in the Rockies."

CHURCH NO LONGER POSSESSES POWER BECAUSE IT LACKS FAITH, SAYS SUNDAY

Faith, He Declares Can Never Die; God Is the Same Yesterday, Today and Forever

The Rev. William A. Sunday preached on "Faith" yesterday afternoon. The sermon was as follows: Text, "If ye have faith so much as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, remove hence unto yonder place, and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you." Matthew 17:20.

No money or culture, but faith.

No man or woman can read the new testament thoughtfully and prayerfully and not be impressed by the great things which are promised to those who believe. Some are so great that they stagger you; some in their immensity are almost unbelievable. You think there must be some mistake and that these do not apply to us. There is nothing in the Bible that does not apply to us. They were made to the Jews of olden times, but take this: "Verily I say unto you, greater works than this shall ye do because I go to my father, and I will send the Holy Spirit."

Why hasn't the church the power now? The church doesn't need an apology—it needs a rebuke, yet preachers spend their time apologizing and trying to excuse themselves. It is so far sweeping in its declaration that it is surprising. The little power of the church today is because the church is not meeting the conditions. I don't believe Jesus Christ ever made promises and did not intend to fulfill them, and I won't stand for you to say so a moment.

Take this: "Whatever ye shall ask the Father in my name that shall I do." That's God's blank check, signed with his name, and you can fill in any amount you want to.

Must Have Faith.

I had a friend who is a preacher and his wife died when a baby was born. One day a multimillionaire came around to him and told him he needed a rest. He said he knew he did, but he couldn't afford to take it. The millionaire told him that he couldn't afford not to take it, and the next day he brought him around a blank check with his name signed to it. He said: "Take this and fill it out to suit yourself." My friend said: "Why I might fill it out for $500,000." He said: "Fill it out for $500,000 if you want to and it will be honored. Go take a rest." My friend shoved the check in his pocket and started on the trip. When he was on the train he looked around at the people and wondered how much they had back of them. On the seashore he wondered how much the people there had to back them. Then he would walk in the hotel corridors and think how much the people there had to back them. He didn't stop to think how much a stamp would cost. He just ordered it and never thought of the price. He had the millionaire's blank check to draw on. The Bible says the Lord shall supply your needs from his riches. He says whatever you ask of him you will receive. You don't receive it because you haven't faith. Without faith it is impossible to please God, and all the ritualisms, ethics, sociology, philosophy won't do it. God don't care anything about that. Faith is the measure of your power.

If you want to know how much power you have ask yourself how much faith you have. "If ye abide in me, my words abide in you. Then you will, and it will be done unto you." "If you abide in me," that's not a creed, that's a dogma, that's not ritualistic but a reigning, living Christ.

Measure of Power.

You seldom see people with enough faith. "If ye have the faith equal to a grain of mustard seed ye can move mountains." I see by this that God expects his children to do great things. Faith is the measure of your power, not numbers. I don't care if a church has 2,000 members. What I ask is, how much power have they. I believe it is the power of every heaven-born Christian to move mountains.

The church can do anything with faith. I don't believe the devil can pile enough obstacles in the way that can't be prayed away, Jesus said: "If thou canst believe, nothing is impossible," and immediately the devil was cast out. The same way with every miracle. Someone had to have faith. It's the same today. Where you see power, someone has faith. If there is no power, no one has faith. Faith puts the scepter of God's power in the hands of that individual. You blame the evangelist and the preacher, but you want to blame the pews, that's where it is. If the church had faith enough she could do anything. God always saves according to faith, but it is up to the crowd. There were places where the evangelist couldn't do any mighty work because of the unbelief; in other words he didn't work through those channels. As worldliness increases, faith decreases. That's the trouble with too many churches today.

Understanding Religion.

Faith is to us what the trolley is to a street car. It's the means by which the electricity gets from the source into the dynamos. I can't touch God with my hand, but I can touch you. You're material—he's spiritual. You must touch God by faith. Worship him in spirit and in truth. There is a law of faith in electricity and when you apply it you will have power. So you must apply your faith in God. That's all there is to it. It's the most common-sense thing in the world—this religion. You say you don't understand it. You don't have to understand electricity to ride on the car. You don't have to understand electricity to send a telegraph message, so do what God tells you, whether you understand it or not, and you will be blessed. The trouble with the church is that while they have fine organs, fine pews and fine pulpits, they are not in connection with the prayer house.

There are farms and ranches where cattle drink by stepping on a platform. The troughs are dry, but when the cattle step on the platform the water pushes out the plugs and the troughs fill up. Thus they water themselves. Here comes a steer who has never experienced this. We'll say he is a high-grade steer—one of these higher critics. He looks at the trough and says: "You can't fool me. I'm too wise. I know there is no water there and I won't get on the platform until I see the water." And he'll stand there until he rots. When he gets on the platform he'll see the water, but not until then. A farmer puts corn in the ground and it remains there a long time before he sees it. You plant seed in the garden; you have faith that it will grow. You have to believe then, too, before you see. If a man didn't have faith he wouldn't have a potato to peel in the winter time.

Harvest Plentiful.

Why didn't the text say as a grain of sand? Because the sand if dead; has no power, but a seed will grow and develop. Back in Kansas a farmer planted a kernel of wheat. When it came up he divided them until when the harvest came he had 29 pounds from one kernel. If you'll count up, you'll find out how much this had multiplied. Its the same way with religion. You take an ear of corn. Each grain will make a hill, and when you get through you will have 1,599 times as much as you sowed. So it is with religion; you get more than you give. If you don't give much you will cry out with David: "My cup runneth over." Therefore, faith grows and multiplies, just like the seed.

Don't be like the slothful servant who wrapped up his talent in a napkin and then when the master returned went and dug it up and said to him: "Here's what you gave me." "What's that?" "Here's what you gave me." "Let's see. 10, 20, 23, 30—yes here it all is." But the master told him he expected him to put the money out on interest if nothing else. That will be the way with you. You go to heaven yourself and the Lord will say: "I gave you salvation." And you tell him: "Here it is." He'll ask you if you have saved anyone else.

Suppose your had a child that was born 10 years ago and hadn't grown an inch since then. Its clothes would be the same size today as when it was born. It would be a monstrosity. Some people wear the same size spiritual garment as they did when they joined the church.

You'll be saved by your faith, but you'll be rewarded by your works.

Farming Faith.

I suspect there are church people here that haven't as much faith today as the day they were converted. The trouble is they didn't farm it.

"If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed ye shall move mountains." There is no use praying to the Lord and saying: "Lord increase our faith." That's foolishness. When you say: "Lord increase our faith." Nonsense.

Do you wonder that God's disgusted? Like a farmer who would get down before his corn crib and pray: "Lord give me a big crop of corn, about 60 bushels to an acre," and then not plant any corn. It's just as foolish to pray to the Lord to increase it as it would be for that farmer to pray and not plant any corn.

But you say: "That was intended for the disciples and not for us." Yet you believe when he said: "Those that come unto me I will in nowise cast out." You take the salvation promise, but you take the faith and say it was meant for the Jews. You're a fool.

Faith in God is as unchangeable as sunshine of Abraham's day. The faith of Abraham is the same as the faith we should have today, and yet it is easier for us to have faith than for him, because we have more evidence. If Abraham hadn't had faith we would have had no Jewish nation, no Bible, no plan of redemption, and yet we have 10,000 times more evidence and his faith puts us to shame and disgrace.

Monument to Faith.

"If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed ye shall move mountains."

Fifteen years ago Dr. Cullis of Boston died and left a great monument to his faith. He bought and paid for a park costing $100,000 and several houses and the money all came through prayer. A man out west once addressed a letter to him this way: "The man who believes in God, Boston, Mass.," and the mail carrier laid it on the table of Dr. Cullis. The park and houses were for the caring of consumptives, and every cent of the money came through his prayers.

If a man would address a letter to you that way, would you get it? Every man ought to so live that if a letter came addressed that way it would give the postmaster brain fever trying to figure out whom it should go to.

One day I thought I would try that, and I addressed a letter to my friend, Major Cole, that way: "The man who believes in God, Adrian, Mich.," and the mail carrier took it to his house. He didn't take it to any preacher in town. Would they do it in you?

Do you read the funny supplement of the papers? I do. It rests me. I like to read the Katzenjammer Kids and Foxy Grandpa and all of them. Yes, I like to laugh at them. Do you know the fellow that draws the pictures of Foxy Grandpa? He always signs them with a picture of a bunny, and if you'd draw a rabbit on an envelop and address it to New York they'd take it to the New York Herald!

Story About Mueller.

I think this is one of the most remarkable stories of the Nineteenth century. George Mueller of Bristol, England, died in 1898. In his life he supported thousands of orphans and didn't have a cent. He was educated by faith for the Episcopal ministry more as a business investment than anything else, because the Episcopal church is the state church and he would never be out of a job. He read the Bible through from start to finish 105 times. I'll bet there are hundreds out here that haven't read it once and I won't include the ministers, either. Of course, they all have a good general knowledge, so have you, but I mean, read it through.

One day he was reading and was especially impressed by these two verses: "Blessed is the man that trusts in him," and "No good thing will I withhold from him that walks uprights."

He went to the board and told them if they wanted him to stay there they would have to cut out his salary and put boxes in the church. All that was placed in the boxes would be his money, none of it going for current expenses. They told him he would starve, but he said that was his ultimatum, so they agreed to it. The first year he got more than what his salary would amount to and he saved a little. The second year he got more than double the first year and he saved much of it. The third year he got three times as much as the first and he put some away and the fourth year he increased.

Finds Life Mission.

Three orphan children came to him and he adopted them. The next year there were several more and he took care of them. Then he realized that his mission in life would be to care for homeless children. He rented houses to care for them. This went on for 25 years and he bought a house and kept some orphans. The neighborhood objected to his having so many orphans, so he went before the Lord and said that he saw caring for orphans was to be his life work and told the Lord he had to have some money. That mail brought him a check for $500 and then the money came streaming in until George Mueller had $50,000 in cash. He wouldn't run in debt. He wouldn't run an account. He had to

FIND GOD; OTHER FOLKS WILL LOOK BETTER WHEN YOU SEE THEM THROUGH SALVATION

Billy Sunday

Faith Alone Will Open Door to Heaven, for It Is God's Countersign, Says Evangelist

The Rev. W. A. Sunday took for the subject of his sermon in the tabernacle last evening, "Seek ye the Lord." He said:

Text: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."—Isaiah 55:6-7.

It is a great privilege a man has to be a Christian. Christianity shows the difference in a man when he has God in his heart from what he was without God. My text is the imperative call of God to the unsaved. It is addressed to the moralist as well as to the man who has broken every commandment of God.

The first thing to remember about being saved is that salvation is a personal matter. "Seek ye the Lord"—that means every one must seek for himself. It won't do for the children to seek for the parent. If you were sick all the medicine I might take wouldn't do you any good. Salvation is a personal matter that no one else can do for you; you must attend to it yourself.

You say, "I don't feel any especial alarm." Well, I pity you. God is alarmed, so there must be something wrong. You say you don't believe it. Well, you come to me and prove what you don't believe isn't true. You go and gather all the books of all the nations that ever existed in the world. Cull from them all that is good and you can't produce a book that would touch the hem of the garment of the Bible.

It won't do you any good if your wife is a Christian. You have got to be something more than a brother-in-law to the church. You may say, "I can't understand all the Bible teaches." Neither can I, but I can understand some of it, and usually the man who says he can't understand the Bible isn't living up to what he can understand. God won't hold you responsible for doing what you haven't got sense enough to do. If I can understand more than you, God holds me responsible to do more than you.

If you seek first the kingdom of God your understanding will grow.

You say, "Well, I can't understand how Jesus' dying on the cross and shedding his blood can save me. You don't need to understand it—obey it. I don't know how it is that putting a seed in the ground will make the seed grow—I don't need to understand it. We don't have to understand how the food we eat builds muscle, brain and tissue—just shovel the grub down and forget it.

God a Revelation.

God is a revelation—not an explanation. You can't explain how a seed will grow, but put it in the ground and it will reveal to you that it does, although you can't explain why.

But never mind what we don't know. You can go and pick up the dewdrops from the doorstep and may find in them a rainbow on which an angel will stand and weep over a dying world! You say, "There are hypocrites in the church." I know it; and there are many in the church that are not, too. Heaven doesn't look right when you look at it through a beveled glass, or when you try to look at it with the devil's goggles on. Just give your heart to God, and you will see thousands of hypocrites outside the church where you see one in there now.

Find God and other folks will look a good deal better to you when you look at them through salvation. You will find your neighbor's house will look a good deal better if you only wash your own windows, old man. The fellow who looks through cobwebs sees spiders all the time. You say, "I never did any harm." That has nothing to do with the case; conduct is not an issue. There are plenty of snakes in the grass that have never bitten anybody yet. But you wouldn't let your children play with a snake because it had never done any harm. Nobody would vote to turn a mad dog loose on the streets because it had not bitten anybody yet. There is no difference between being wrong and doing wrong, and the reason you do wrong is because you are wrong; and the reason you are wrong is because you won't yield to God. A man gets into the lodge on the password—not because he is president of a bank. You will get into heaven because you are a Christian—not because you are richer than your neighbor and can wear better clothes. You can't get into heaven unless you are born again. You can't walk into heaven and say, "Lord, I was a director of the bank in Colorado Springs," or "I was the president of the United States," or "I was the king of England." It is faith in Jesus that opens the door and lets you in, or shuts it in your face. Faith in Christ is the countersign that passes all through the door of heaven.

You say, "Bill, I can do right and not belong to church." You say, "I can do right and be a Christian and not be a member of any church." Maybe you can; I can't. I have never in my life seen a successful, useful, or helpful Christian that stayed out of the church. You want all the help you can get. When any man is truly converted, the first thing he will do will be to look for some church. So you say, "Well, I don't have to be a member of the church to be a Christian." I have known men that could live with a woman they were not married to, but that is not my way. Church membership is not mentioned. "Let the wicked forsake his way." If you forsake your way, you will hunt up a church just as quickly as you can find one. Church membership will take care of itself. "Seek ye the Lord"—don't think about it. Do it now.

Don't Wait a Day.

Don't conclude that you will think about it tomorrow. Do it with all your might until you find it. It will be easier for the heavens to dissolve and the planets to stop than that the Lord's word should fail. I believe the blackest lie the devil ever persuaded man to believe is that God is hard to find. God is nearer to you tonight than the friend by your side, and he is easily found when you seek him with a willing heart. And God can only be found immediately when you seek him with the same earnestness that men looking for wealth seek gold, and whenever a man has failed to find God it was because he was not willing to forsake all sin. There is such a thing as seeking anything too late. Many a man has died on the operating table from an appendicitis because he waited too long before he went to the surgeon. Many a person has died from consumption that might still be on earth if he had not been negligent.

Seeking God should be the first part of a man's life, and yet it is the last thing that some men do before an undertaker calls for them.

It is better that all your days be filled with pain and all your nights with distress than to miss heaven at last. We lay aside everything and seek health when we find it failing. Men will give up home and business, and turn their back upon wife, friends and children. No sacrifice is too great if it only promises to put the bloom of health on your cheeks and elasticity in your step and endurance in your brain. Men will sleep out of doors in zero weather, give up their homes and loved ones and live on mountains, in the hope that it will restore them to health, when dying from consumption.

I was preaching back in Minnesota some years ago and was going out to fill an engagement one morning. The thermometer registered 22 below zero and the snow has about a foot deep. There on the open veranda of a splendid mansion sat a fellow wearing a fur coat, felt boots, a beaver cap and a pair of fur mittens. I turned to my companion and said: "Is that fellow crazy? What is he doing there?" "Oh," he replied, "that is a consumptive trying to beat the game." There he sat reading a newspaper, in weather 22 below zero. Why? Because it promised him health. He was willing to forsake the comforts of his fireside and live out of doors in the hope that it would prolong his life.

Hospital in Desert.

Out in a California desert they have built a four-story building. Not a tree is in sight. You can see the mirage dance here and there. They found a spring of wonderful medicinal properties. The atmosphere is as pure as anywhere else in the United States. They soon had patients from all parts of the world, who were trying to beat death. But a lot of you haven't got enough interest in your souls' salvation to leave your seats and walk down here.

Men will part with their money or anything they possess if it only offers them hope. Let a medical spring be discovered at any point in the world and they will journey to it. Oh, if men would only seek God the way they seek health there wouldn't be a sinner on earth today. Like the woman that was healed by touching Christ's garments: For 12 years she had suffered and had given up everything she had, but she grew worse. When she heard Jesus was coming, she didn't give up. She didn't wait to wash her face. She didn't wait to change her dress. She didn't wait to comb her hair, but sought Jesus as she was.

Never has God's power rolled along the streets like it is doing in Colorado Springs today. It is your opportunity.

In order to get gold, men will give up everything; no pursuit too dangerous, no risk too hazardous, if it only promises wealth. Let an accident occur on the railroad, no matter how hazardous, and everything goes on as before. Let an explosion take place in a powder mill and kill three or four fellows, some fellow will walk right up and take his place. I know of a doctor who lost both eyes the other day experimenting in chemicals. He combined two chemicals and there was a pat ture explosion in which he lost both eyes. He groped his way in darkness because he hoped to find something that would bring him wealth.

Look at the girl in the redlight district. Don't she give up her virtue, her purity, her home and parents and everything that is dear for a few dollars? Won't the saloon keeper sell his soul to hell for the few rotten, whisky-soaked dollars the saloon brings him? Won't the robber poke a gun under your nose and shoot you if you don't hold up your hands? Why? Just because he can put your watch and your money in his pocket. No life is too lonely, no journey is too long, no vigil too great, no labor too hard, no task too repulsive if it only proves gold. Oh, they have drilled through the mountains of Alaska and they have burrowed into the mountains in Colorado; they go to South Africa in search of gold. If men would seek God as hard as they seek wealth, there wouldn't be a man in hell, or on the way there, now.

Will Reap Whirlwind.

Another thing men seek after is pleasure. They will neglect their family, business, everything. He that soweth to the wind shall reap the whirlwind. Why, people will sell their souls into slavery and sin. They will give up the leisure time that they should devote to self-improvement, they will break the laws of health, they will become invalids and break up their homes, just to have some God-forsaken reprobate pat them on the back and say: "You're a dead sport, old man!"

Seek ye the Lord—not health. Seek ye the Lord—not gold. Seek ye the Lord—not pleasure.

Another thing men seek is the gratification of some worldly ambition. Let a man become ambitious and he is spoiled for everything but one thing. There is many a man that will sell his soul to the devil to be elected to some whisky-soaked office that won't pay a thousand a year. They will pour out money like water, and turn night into day in order to be elected. Columbus said: "I will sail west and get to India." The people said: "You are crazy." Columbus knew better. He went around to try to get people to stake him for the voyage. At last, Ferdinand and Isabella pawned their jewels to raise the money for the voyage. He sailed west; yet, instead of discovering India, on that October morning, Columbus landed on the shores of a new world.

There was a fellow who sat one day and watched a woman take a piece of thread and drive it through the eye of a needle and tie a knot in it and sit and sew. He said: "There is a better way than that." He went to his home and thought, and thought, and thought, forgetting his wife and children. After a while he said: "I have got it." Elias Howe was his name, and he invented the sewing machine.

I know of a man who saw an ox-cart go down the street. He said: "There is a better way than that." After a while he saw a horse coming faster, but he said: "There is a better way than that." He sat down and commenced to think. He said: "I have got it." He labored and toiled, and his children cried for bread. "Children," he said, "if I can only put it into shape, papa will be rich." I won't tell you his name, but he invented one of the best automobiles that goes down the street today. His children don't cry for bread now. Ambition rewarded his toil with one of the best autos that shoots down the streets. I am something of a judge of automobiles; I have studied them all.

Heart Must Change.

Seek ye the Lord. Look at Napoleon. He said: "I can lick the world," and he almost did it. But what about God's word? My text says: "Seek ye the Lord." You may go to the doctor only to have him shake his head after a while. Many a person has gone only to be disappointed. Many a person has sought life under a surgeon's knife, only to find the undertaker instead. Many a person has devoted their life to seeking gold, and never found it. Ambitions may fail, but they that seek the Lord are never disappointed. There has got to be a change of heart.

The best words in the English language are the little ones—mother, home, heaven, hope, wife, children, God and Jesus Christ. Let the wicked forsake his way. What is it that makes the man come back to the days of his boyhood. Oh, call back to the days when you had hope and peace. Where is there a woman, beaten down in sin, that would not like to return to the days when, pure as the morning dew, she knelt by her mother's side. That staggering, reeling, jabbering drunkard, helpless and on the way to hell—an I so close to the pit that he can see the sulphur and hear the shrieks of the demons. He would like to return and get back to the day when he could look every honest man square in the face.

Oh, the thief would like to get back to the day when he had never reached out his hands to steal the other man's earnings and savings. Don't your reason and conscience say, when you do wrong: "Go back! Do right?" Sin cuts like a two-edged sword. It not only cuts the man but it cuts his wife and children. God knows, it is bad enough if only the sinner suffers; but that isn't all. You have to suffer, but other people suffer more than you. It hurts that girl to go down and sell her virtue, but it hurts her mother worse. It hurts that man to smash his marriage vows and live with someone on the side, but it also hurts his wife and children. Sin cuts both ways. It hurts that young man to go into a booze joint, and then go staggering and reeling home, and breathe his whisky-soaked breath into the face of his mother; but, great God! it hurts his mother, too. Nothing is more true than this: "One sinner destroys much good."

The lack of proper insulation of electric wires in the Iroquois theater in Chicago caused the deaths of 600 people, and if the man whose negligence caused that frightful calamity had stood there and mowed the people down with a sword, he couldn't have wrought more woeful destruction than he did by his negligence. All sin has the same root. The man who spat in the face of Jesus Christ cried that "crucify him," as plainly as the mob. All sin starts with the rejection of Jesus Christ.

Don't Reject Christ.

Your rejection of Jesus Christ may not cause you to crucify him, but you are rejecting him; so there is no place for you over there; so the whole thing is summed up by your attitude toward Christ. One man rejects Christ, and becomes a drunkard, another becomes a thief, another became a libertine. Every sin springs from rejection of Christ. They will all go to the same place: you go to hell because you reject Christ. Just a word, and I am through. Where is there joy compared to the joy of being a Christian? Say, if any of you men can tell me of a life I can live that is better than the life I do live; if you can tell me of a life by the living of which I can glorify God more and do more for humanity than by living a Christian life, I will live it. I am looking for the best I can find. When I have got Jesus, I have got the best there is. Some people think that being a Christian you must always be solemn. The word of God says: "Ye shall go out with joy, and be led with shouting. The mountains and hills shall break forth before you in singing, and the trees of the field shall clap their hands with joy."

Down in Georgia a preacher used to go to the postoffice 50 or 75 days in the year, and he always looked through the window into the postmaster's office, and smiled his greeting. One day he called for his mail as usual and saluted the postmaster with the hour of the day. The postmaster called him into his office and said: "Since you have been coming to the postoffice I have got so now that I look for you, and after you have gone I feel cheered and inspired. I am glad when you come, and am disappointed if you don't. I have had a pair of boots made for your use. I have left orders for them to make you the best pair of boots they can make of the finest and most expensive material money can buy. That is just a little appreciation of what your smile and cheer has done for me." He said: "Just give God the credit, not me, because it is the Lord." Joy! A man says: "But I would, but I am troubled with doubts." Listen: A famous lawyer lived in New York. He was a skeptic. He was the personal friend of one of the preachers, who, out of courtesy, promised to preach.

This preacher prepared three sermons especially designed to enlighten this lawyer. The lawyer was wealthy, and he knew if he could convert him what it would mean to that community. He preached the first sermon—no results. He preached the second sermon, and the man came down the aisle and took his stand for Christ. "I wish you would tell me what it was in the sermon that led you to Jesus Christ." He said: "Nothing. If you want to know why I am here to accept Jesus Christ, I will tell you."

Each Does His Part.

He said: "You know I have a fine home; you know it is furnished with all the paintings, bric-a-brac, Persian rugs everything of the best that money can buy. Yesterday morning I was starting down to my office. It was 10 below zero. I had my fur-lined coat on, and my collar turned about my ears, my sealskin cap over my ears. I felt out of tune and went down grumbling and growling. You know Tom Hudson, don't you? Well I met Tom carrying a saw horse on one shoulder and a saw on the other. Tom had no overcoat and no mittens on. He was coming down the street singing 'Jesus Paid It All.' All to Him I Owe.' I said, 'Tom, why the devil are you singing a song like that this cold morning—when you have to saw wood to keep your home and children and wife warm, and have no mittens to wear?' What do you think Tom said? I will tell you. He said: 'If you want to know what makes me sing, it is the joy of knowing Christ.' Well, I have been telling you that religion was an intellectual process. When I heard Tom sing I knew it religion was an intellectual process. Tom would never have understood it because he don't have a bright mind. But Tom had experience, which I had not, and I was trying to get in head-first, and he had got in heart first. So I have come to say that I am willing to accept Jesus Christ without experiment."

Let the wicked forsake his way. That is your part. Let the unrighteous forsake his thoughts. That is your part. And let him return to the Lord. That is your part. And he will have mercy upon him. That is God's part. For he will abundantly pardon. That is God's part.

You that reject Christ now are in the same class as those who rejected him 1,900 years ago. No joy is to be compared to that of being a Christian. Christianity puts something in the heart that changes a man's whole nature.

PARIS COMPLETES CENSUS OF ALL TREES IN CITY

PARIS, July 4.—The city authorities have just completed a census of trees in Paris. Only those along the boulevards and avenues amount to 87,647, while those in the public squares add 26,253 to this number. The public gardens such as the Luxembourg and private gardens which are numerous even in the central part of the city, have not been counted.

The trees of the streets include 27,545 plane trees, 13,984 elms, 16,093 chestnuts, 4,867 sycamores, 3,402 limes and 52 poplars. There is only one oak accounted for.

SPRINGS CELEBRATES 'SAFE AND SANE' 4TH

Slight Injury to Aged Man Only Accident; Thousands Enjoy Holiday

The Fourth of July was not exactly sane in Colorado Springs, but it was far from foolish. There was plenty of noise from midnight to midnight, but no serious accidents resulting from fireworks were reported at local hospitals. The only injury traceable to the celebration was that to Ashby McCreery of 410 South Weber street, who was slightly wounded in the arm by a stray bullet.

A good many dollars went up in smoke yesterday with a noisy exit. Small boys with small crackers and large boys with large ones made the atmosphere and senior heads of the city split worse than are the infinitives in an amateur essay.

That the day was a holiday there is no disputing. Everybody and his family or future family were out in the park, the canons or on the mountain tops. It rained, all right, at times during the festive period, but none of the showers were of sufficient duration to interfere with a general movement back toward the soil and the great outdoors.

The band concerts drew large crowds as did the fireworks display and ball game at the Zoo. Special and attractive aerial fireworks were also put off last night at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club, the Union Printers home and Modern Woodmen sanatorium. In addition to these larger displays there were hundreds of private celebrations ranging from one three-ball Roman candle in the half-yard of some of the poorer homes of the city to the varied and gorgeous displays in the yards of some of the city's fine residences.

Local Woodmen of the World had a big time at Falcon, and there the local drill teams put on some fancy stepping work and Mayor McKesson delivered the chief address of the day.

All scenic attractions, the theaters and the railroads report good crowds in attendance at their various offerings, although the stormy weather which prevailed during most of the day greatly reduced the total number handled by them.

On the whole, the 1914 Fourth was a good, full-sized, rambunctious 24 hours, not entirely sane, according to some versions, but on the right side of the foolish line.

UNDERTAKING BUSINESS PLACED ON NEW BASIS

THE FAIRLEY UNDERTAKING COMPANY MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT OF GENERAL INTEREST TO THE PUBLIC

The name of "Fairley" has for over thirty years stood for the very best in Colorado Springs in connection with the undertaking business. The present place of business of The Fairley Undertaking Company, No. 220 East Pikes Peak Avenue, is the most modern and completely equipped in the city. This Company has at all times kept abreast of the progress which has been made in the undertaking business. It will not now lag behind, nor refuse to keep fully abreast of the times.

Many of the leading undertaking firms of the country, recognizing the unusual financial burdens resting upon the people, the result of the high cost of living, and further recognizing the additional financial burdens encountered when sickness and death overtake some member of the family, have decided to lessen this expense by reducing the prices which have heretofore prevailed in connection with funerals. The Fairley Undertaking Company has decided to do the same in Colorado Springs.

Accordingly, the following prices, hereafter, will be in effect:

Black Cloth Casket, 30.00. Prevailing price in Colorado Springs, $40.00 to $50.00.

Black Cloth Casket (better grade), $35.00. Prevailing price in Colorado Springs, $50.00 to $65.00.

Black Broadcloth Casket, $50.00. Prevailing price in Colorado Springs, $75.00 to $85.00.

White and silver-gray, embossed Plush Casket, $50.00. Prevailing price in Colorado Springs, $75.00 to $85.00.

Solid Oak State Casket, polished or weathered finish, $100.00. Prevailing price in Colorado Springs, $150.00 to $200.00.

In each instance the price quoted includes the outside box.

The caskets above enumerated are staples, and most generally used. All other grades will be sold at prices correspondingly reduced, including all cloth caskets, State caskets, highest grade oaks and mahoganies, and all solid bronze caskets; in fact, all designs, materials, qualities and grades.

The prevailing price for embalming a body for shipment is $50.00. Our price, $25.00.

When the interment is to be local and the body is not to be held for several days, we will make no charge for embalming.

We will make no additional charge (except in unusual cases) for services rendered in caring for the body, whether embalmed or not. The prevailing custom in Colorado Springs is to make to those who are thought able to afford it, an additional charge for such services amounting to anywhere from $10.00 to $50.00, and sometimes even more.

We will furnish hearse, either automobile or horse-drawn, for $5.00. The prevailing charge in Colorado Springs is $10.00.

We will make no charge for the use of our chapel, which is the most complete and best appointed in the city.

These reductions in prices do not mean that we are seeking to establish our firm as a cut-rate undertaking establishment. On the contrary, we are merely meeting changed conditions which have affected the undertaking as well as many other lines of business.

At the prices quoted, we can and will continue to provide the very best obtainable in quality and finish of goods and in services rendered.

There will be no lowering of the standard which we have set and for over thirty years have maintained as the leading undertaking firm in Colorado Springs.

Under no circumstances will we sacrifice the reputation which we have established, but it will continue to be in the future as it has been in the past, "Fairleys for the best of everything in the undertaking business."

Our Undertaking establishment is the only one in the city especially built for the purpose. It is the most sanitary, the best appointed and the most thoroughly equipped west of the Missouri river.

We ask you to inspect our parlors, chapel, caskets, trimmings, sanitary morgue and general equipment.

We have the best of everything at the lowest possible prices consistent with the high-class services rendered.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. STATE PROHIBITIONISTS NAME ELECTION TICKET the separation of church and state, urged the use of the Bible in the public schools, and opposed the sending of delinquent children to any sectarian institution. It declared for municipal ownership of public utilities, for municipal employment bureaus and municipal markets, and advocated the adoption of a national uniform marriage and divorce law. It also went on record for the granting of a judge of election to each political organization having a ticket to be voted on, for one day of rest in seven, for good roads, and for the enlargement of the state insane asylum in order that the insane may be properly cared for. In addition to the platform, the convention adopted a series of resolutions, one of which indorsed the policy of Woodrow Wilson in dealing with Columbia and Mexico.

Speaks for Prohibition.

At the opening of its session yesterday morning, before choosing candidates, the convention listened to an address by the Rev. T. L. Buffey. This address was, in part, as follows:

"I am unable to understand how a Christian, and especially a minister, can be anything but a prohibitionist. Of all things that are despicable and damnable in our country that destroy our people, is the saloon. God can fight a great battle with a small company.

"The place for the saloon is in hell, where we are going to send it. No man has ever been able to advance an argument in favor of the saloon. Just think of the laws that have been passed to regulate the saloon. Just think of the evils associated with it; gambling and the redlight district.

"I was in a little town on the western slope the other day. They had a little grocery store and four saloons, without a restaurant. I spoke to the marshal about closing them, when he replied: 'It would kill business in this town if the saloons are closed.'

"What is the ground of prohibition? That a thing is evil in itself.

"I can tear down my house with a crowbar, but I can't burn it down, because the fire endangers my neighbors' houses.

"If a thing endangers the public welfare it is prohibited. Prohibition laws are protective and not reformatory. Prohibition does not attempt to control what men shall eat or drink, but it seeks to destroy a traffic.

"The liquor traffic cries about 'personal liberty,' but the cry is false and misleading. Shall 'personal liberty' be used to allow a mob to destroy life? Can 'personal liberty' permit a man with smallpox walk on our streets? Can a man drive an auto down our streets at 40 miles an hour?

"The saloon invites the drunkard, the gambler, the thief, the harlot to come into your state. Prohibition invites the sober, industrious, home-loving people to come to our state; men who want to build homes and educate their children.

"We want men and women in this fight who know how to fight. Never get discouraged, for we are going to see victory crown our labors."

Party Adopts Platform.

The convention adopted the following platform:

"That the liquor traffic is a crime, not a business; that it seeks to dominate all political parties and the press and business in the most tyrannical fashion. All who vote with political parties that license its continuance are equally guilty with the saloon keepers for the evils growing out of the use of intoxicating liquor.

"We are unalterably opposed to all laws that license the manufacture, sale, importation and transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes, and to repeal such laws and destroy the nefarious traffic, a political party must be elected to power pledged to accomplish these ends.

"The rigid enforcement of the constitutional provisions for the separation of church and state; but we insist that the Bible is not a sectarian book, and its use in the public schools should be permitted. We are opposed to the sending of delinquent children to any sectarian institution.

"The ownership of public utilities by our towns and cities, the establishment of municipal employment bureaus and markets that will bring together the producer and consumer, thereby increasing the profits of the former and decreasing the cost of living to the latter; all under strict civil service law.

"The protection of the purity and stability of the American home, the enactment of a national uniform marriage and divorce law, the extermination of polygamy and the white slave traffic, and the complete suppression of the social evil.

Would Enforce All Laws.

"The complete and impartial enforcement of all laws; the prompt removal of any and all officials who fail to do their duty, and the enactment of the necessary legislation which will enable the state officers to enforce the laws where local officials fail to do so.

"The changing of the law to permit each political organization, having a ticket, to be voted for at an election, to have a judge in each voting precinct, and that such judges perform all the duties of the clerks now employed.

"The right of every man to one day's rest in seven.

"The complete suppression of all violations of law by both employers and employes; the right of the state to engage in supplying the citizens of the state with the necessities of life when those engaged in their production fail to do so, or only furnish them at an exhorbitant cost.

"The adoption of the prohibition amendment to the constitution of the state and the election only of officers pledged to its enforcement.

"The construction of good roads; but we favor a more economical and efficient policy of construction to lessen the burden to the taxpayers.

"The establishment of courts of arbitration for the adjustment of difficulties in the industrial world.

"The enlargement of the insane asylum for the proper care of the insane, who are now crowded into inadequate quarters at Pueblo and confined in the county jails for lack of other accommodations.

Man Blown to Pieces.

Hansen was blown to pieces in the explosion. Part of his body was found on a church roof and part on car tracks in the street. Berg is missing and is counted among the victims. The other person known to have been killed was Mary Claves, 65 years old, a cigarmaker, who occupied an apartment adjoining the one in which the explosion occurred.

In support of the police theory that a bomb was being made for use in Tarrytown, a search of Caron's apartment disclosed two dry batteries, wired for use; a loaded revolver, cartridges and a partly constructed blackjack, together with a bowl of yellow substance thought to have been used in bomb construction.

CEREMONIOUS

If there is one thing a commercial traveler dislikes more than another it is elaborate ceremony, and if the spirit of his profession is in him he generally finds some way to let his prejudices be known.

One evening a traveling salesman from Cincinnati happened to sit down at a hotel table in company with half a dozen state legislators, who talked with excessive formality. It was "Will the gentleman from Hardin do this?" and "Does the gentleman from Franklin want that?" the ordinary form of direct address being carefully eschewed.

For nearly 10 minutes the commercial traveler suffered in silence. Then he turned to the waiter and said in deep, oratorical tones:

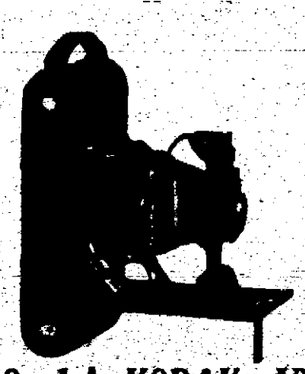

"Will the gentleman from Ethiopia please pass the butter?"

The remedy was effectual.

Oil well pumps in Texas are now operated by electric motors.

Electrically generated ozone is used for preserving meats in Germany.

Nearly 70 per cent of the gasoline motor cars have adopted electric self-starters.

The new wireless station at Fort Myer, near Washington, has a range of more than 5,000 miles.

Some of the finest examples of electrically equipped coal mines are to be found in Nova Scotia.

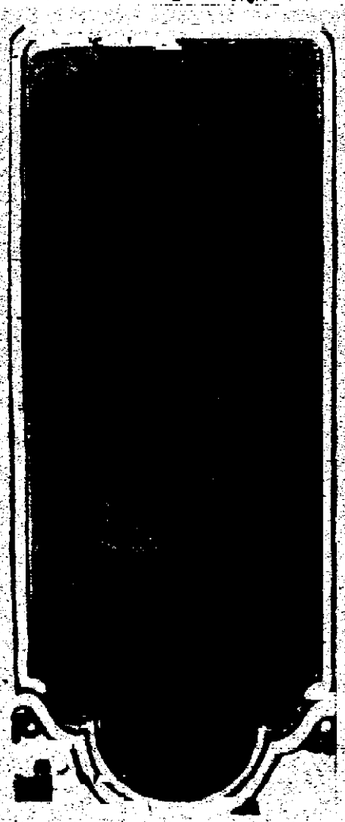

The Great Northern Railway company will install gas electric motor cars for its short line work.

500 PEOPLE ARE NOW AT WORK ON 'EAGLE'S NEST'

Fielding, in Charge of Feature Production, Stickler for Strict Adherence to Smallest Details

In the three motion picture companies now acting in the Pikes Peak region under the direction of Romaine Fielding, the Lubin star, there are 500 participants. They are not all actors, but are all used in the photoplays. In his regular three companies there are about 200 people. It may be the general impression that moving picture actors are just average people along educational lines. Yet of the 200 people employed regularly by Fielding, more than 10 per cent are college graduates. Mr. Fielding is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and also of the medical school of Columbia university, New York city. In his company are men who have served in the army, navy and marine corps.

Recently in putting on a comedy centered about a circus it developed that among his actors were acrobats, tight and slack wire walkers, trapeze performers and those possessing every talent necessary for the production of a modern circus.

Scores of the Lubin players have played before the footlights for years and in some of the principal theaters of the United States.

Mr. Fielding, in addition to his talent along dramatic lines, is somewhat of an artist. He has made several oils in Glen Eyrie since his sojourn here. He does not set himself up as a world-beater in the artistic field, but declares that he gets much deviation and fun from the brush. His artistic instinct plays him in good stead in arranging the settings for the many scenes he produces each day.

Correct as to Details.

In the production of "Eagle's Nest," now going on here, Fielding is scrupulously particular regarding the absolutely correct costumes of the time in which the play is laid, a period from 1848 to 1870. The members of his companies know well his insistence in all his plays of adhering to clothes and furniture of the correct period, and any deviation means a decided "call down." It appears that the cowboys, who are taking part in the play, have caught the spirit, for the other day Edwin Arden, the author of the play, joined a group of these cowboys as he was riding over to Blair Athol. He was attired in the up-to-date riding breeches and puttees which he uses in Central park. As he joined the cowboys one rode up to him and said: "Excuse me, but Mr. Fielding won't let you ride with this outfit in those up-to-date store clothes."

Arden was quick to see the point and thanked the cowpuncher and rode on. Later he heard that one of the other cowboys who overheard the "call down" said: "Bo, do you know who you were talking to? That's the gent who wrote 'Eagle's Nest' and he's about as big a crank on correct dress as Mr. Fielding."

To Censor Advertising.

Kansas is a live state when it comes to the question of the best in newspaper politics, and MacLennan in an interview last night told of a recent innovation in the newspaper game, which was started at the national newspaper conference held at Lawrence, Kan., in May.

He spoke of the new state board of censorship for newspaper advertising, of which he is chairman. The board has for its purpose the raising of the standard of advertising in Kansas newspapers.

"Our board," he said, "will investigate any doubtful advertiser which any newspaper publisher refers to us. We refer the matter to the secretary of the state board of health, who investigates the products or articles to be advertised. We then make a report to the publisher. We deal especially with medical advertisements.

"According to Dr. S. J. Crumbine, secretary of the Kansas state board of health, the head of the list of most harmful nostrums advertised are those pretending to be cures for cancer, consumption and Bright's disease. Next he places those generalized as 'Lost Manhood' remedies.

"Practically all of these nostrums have been submitted to a chemical analysis in the laboratories of the American Medical society, says Dr. Crumbine, and it has been found that few or none have the right to be classed as cures for the things they pretend to cure. Dr. Crumbine places these nostrums in two divisions, those which are actually harmful and those merely deceptive."

Included in Mr. MacLennan's party are Mrs. MacLennan, Miss Mary MacLennan, Mrs. Reid Alexander, Miss Henriette Alexander and Miss Katherine Dolman, all of Topeka.

FEWER FLIES

COMMISSIONER FROST says there are fewer flies in Colorado Springs this summer than ever before, and his opinion should be accepted as authoritative, because he has been here almost since the days of Lieutenant Pike, and, incidentally, he is the official custodian of the city's health. However, he disclaims credit for the Health Department and gives it to "the people who have been swatting so faithfully."

Without knowing just what a fly census would show, we venture to guess that Mr. Frost is right. Flies are scarce in Colorado Springs this summer; they are "roosting high." For several years Health Officer Gillett and the newspapers have carried on vigorous campaigns to encourage fly swatting and discourage the conditions which produce bountiful crops of the insect pests. The beneficial results have been more apparent each season. One can spend an hour or two driving through the alleys and find very few places where flies are likely to breed in large numbers. Stables, which under ordinary conditions produce more flies than all other sources combined, are under close supervision, and improvement is also apparent in the greater interest shown by the public in the care of garbage cans.

The public has learned in recent years that flies are not merely a source of annoyance to bald pates; they are industrious purveyors of filth and disease germs, and the world would be better off if they were wholly exterminated. That is an end not likely to be attained, but we can at least achieve substantial benefits by keeping up a vigorous war against them.

SCHOOL EXPENSES

A BULLETIN on "school statistics of cities," just issued by the Census Bureau, shows that Colorado Springs ranks fourth in a list of 195 cities in the amount of its expenditures for public school purposes per one hundred inhabitants. Pasadena comes first with an expenditure of $899 a year per one hundred inhabitants, followed by Newton, Mass., with $834; Mount Vernon, N. Y., $844; Colorado Springs, $786; New Rochelle, N. Y., $744, and Berkeley, Cal., $735.

The cities with the lowest average per one hundred inhabitants were Jacksonville, Fla., $169; Tampa, Fla., $173; Portsmouth, Va., $181; Charleston, S. C., $191. The average for the 195 cities was $491.

There is an interesting contrast between the character of the cities which stand at the top of the list and that of those at the bottom. The places named in the first division, of which Colorado Springs is one, are known for their wealth, beauty and progressiveness. The others are Southern cities with large negro populations. In many parts of the South the blacks outnumber the whites and the cost of maintaining negro schools, being raised by taxation, is necessarily borne almost entirely by the white population. Perhaps it is not surprising then that school expenditures in Southern cities are kept down to a comparatively low figure.

In our own case the expenditure is anything but an evidence of extravagance; on the contrary, it ought to be a matter of pride. We have the testimony of educators of nation-wide reputation that our public schools are not excelled by those of any other city in the country, and in some respects they are unequaled. The growth of the city in the last decade has necessitated the construction of a number of costly new buildings, imposing a heavy burden on the taxpayers. But it is doubtful if there is any other purpose for which the people as a whole pay taxes as willingly as for the support of their schools. And the reason is that the results are apparent.

PROTECTING THE DEMOCRATS

EFFORTS of Louisiana Democrats to prevent the wholesale defection of their members to the Progressive party have taken an amusing turn, and it may soon be "agin the law" for an erstwhile Jeffersonian of that state to attempt to vote a Bull Moose ticket. It appears that a good many Democrats have been going over to the Progressive camp lately, the list including three former members of the Democratic State Central Committee, seventeen members of the lower house of the legislature, and two Wilson electors, both of whom are now Progressive county chairmen.

To stem the tide of revolt the Democrats introduced two bills in the legislature. One requires a voter, on being challenged, to swear that he is voting at the primaries the ticket he voted at the last election. The other measure provides that nobody who has changed his party affiliation can vote at a primary unless the change took place at least two years before the primary.

The Democrats who concocted these interesting bills fancied that they were thereby preventing members of their party from joining the Progressives. But in the course of the debate somebody made the discovery that they were playing with a two-edged sword, for if the laws made it hard for a Democrat to become a Progressive, they made it equally hard for a one-time Progressive, or Republican, to get back into the Democratic ranks. One Democratic leader denounced it as "a scheme to punish political independence and perpetuate the Progressive party."

The plan, of course, is too absurd for serious consideration, but it is interesting as showing the fright into which Southern Democrats have been thrown by Progressive gains.

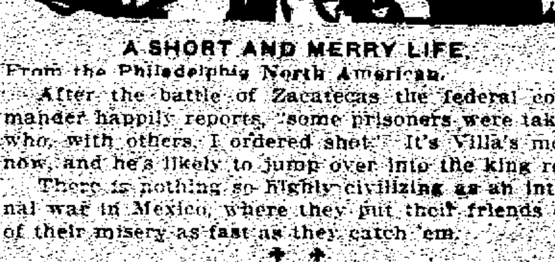

PORTO RICAN CITIZENSHIP

AS A result of the Spanish-American War the United States acquired two island dependencies, the Philippines and Porto Rico, and assumed a protectorate over a third, Cuba. Of the three Porto Rico has been the best behaved and least troublesome, and if rewards are to be forthcoming it is probably entitled to first choice.

Ever since the American flag went up in the island sixteen years ago the people have been asking for American citizenship. Their status has always been uncertain. They were neither aliens nor citizens. In some ways they were worse off than when they were under Spanish rule.

A few months ago Senator Shafroth introduced a bill conferring citizenship upon the citizens, and it is now reported that the measure is likely to become a law. Instead of the council appointed by the President, there would be an elective Senate to enact local legislation, but it would be held in check by the Governor's veto. An educational qualification would be required for suffrage.

The enactment of this law would undoubtedly promote good feeling in Porto Rico. The people, unlike the Cubans and Filipinos, have never shown revolutionary tendencies; on the contrary, they are peaceable and industrious, and fully entitled to the new privileges in store for them.

A SHORT AND MERRY LIFE.

From the Philadelphia North American.

After the battle of Zacatecas the federal commander happily reports, "some prisoners were taken, who, with others, I ordered shot." It's Villa's move now, and he's likely to jump over into the king row.

There is nothing so highly civilizing as an internal war in Mexico, where they put their friends out of their misery as fast as they catch 'em.

THRIFTY LITTLE COUNTRIES

From the Buffalo Evening Times.

Have little countries the inside track on getting rich? There is considerable evidence to that effect. Something akin to consternation has been caused among bankers in France, Germany and Italy, by the disposition of people in those three countries to deposit their money in the banks of Switzerland. The land of William Tell has become one of the money powers of the world. It is asserted that 20 Swiss banks have more aggregate capital than the combined state and national banks of New York city.

But Switzerland is far from being the only example. Denmark, another small country, is almost literally without paupers. Holland is a marvel of prosperity and thrift. Belgium is the busiest industrial hive in Europe.

There must be some underlying reason why these little nations get along so finely. In all of them certain special economics are well known to have been studied and applied with unusual skill.

But why in them more than anywhere else? Perhaps the very circumstances of smallness, with its tendency to make a nation like one family, makes economic problems simpler, and brings more concertedness of effort to solve them.

THE COLORADO STRIKE.

Governor Ammons, in the July North American Review.

Day by day the notion that an unholy alliance existed between the state authorities and the coal mine owners was disseminated throughout the state and country by the efficient press bureau of labor organization. Every argument was used to substantiate that idea. Its utter lack of foundation will go without saying. . . . Ludlow was an incident, not an event. The battles and crimes that were committed during the following 10 days would doubtless have occurred had there been no Ludlow incident. . . .

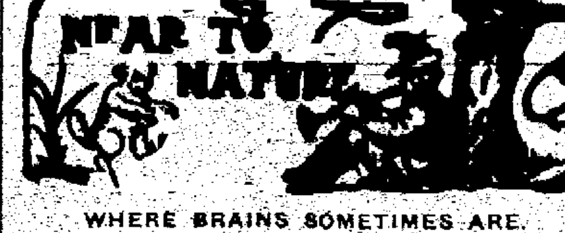

When the troops were withdrawn, 34 men were left upon police duty near Ludlow, the largest of the tent colonies. On April 20 these men were attacked by 10 times their number of strikers. The objective was doubtless the villages two or three miles distant containing the nonunion workmen and their families. The National guard thus attacked defended themselves, and later put the strikers to flight and destroyed their colony. The women and children were all removed to places of safety before the attack save only those who were concealed in pits dug beneath the tents. From these pits the soldiers rescued over 50 women and children while the tents were burning. This rescue was made with distinguished bravery and under a heavy fire from the strikers themselves. One pit, almost hermetically sealed, escaped the notice of the rescuers, and 36 hours later was discovered and found to contain the bodies of two women and 11 children. These poor people died of suffocation in their subterranean prison, where they had been confined by their would-be protectors. Not a burn or a char or a bullet mark was found upon any of them. One little boy was accidentally shot, probably by a striker's bullet. With that exception no women or children were shot or burned or otherwise hurt during the day's fighting. There was no massacre. . . .

So long, at least, as the United States troops remain in Colorado, or when I or some more potent agent shall have succeeded in settling the strike, which, of course, is the root of the evil, peace and order will prevail.

IMPERFECTIONS TO INSIDER AND OUTSIDER.

From the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

"Government is not perfect," said William Jennings Bryan, addressing a graduating class recently, "and I do not expect that it ever will be." Yet while government pays $12,000 a year as a sideline to a Chautauqua lecture occupation Mr. Bryan will do the best he can to give an imitation of a man being patient with its imperfections. It was when not a part of government, and unsalaried thereby, which was most of his life, that its imperfections appeared so intolerable that it was necessary to go out on the circuit to make speeches in denunciation of them. The imperfections of government to the man on the inside looking out are one thing; to the man on the outside looking in they are different. If it wasn't that Mr. Bryan has been hearing from the outsider observing the insider he would be altogether content with his present situation in life. But it is instructive and entertaining to perceive Mr. Bryan in an apologetic instead of denunciatory mood.

From the Wisconsin Christian Advocate.

One of my colleagues was introduced to a conference in Alabama as follows: "Prof. Haines will now speak to us. Talks on Thrift

(American Bankers Association)

ARE YOU REALLY INDEPENDENT?

"The difference between the woman with a bank account and the woman without one is the difference between happiness and misery. If I could say one word more earnest than any other, it would be to make a fetish of 'Thrift.'"—Dorothy Dix.

In many cities the big department stores, on the last day of the month, advertise to the effect that "all purchases made today by charged customers will be billed on next month's statement, payable in the early part of the month after next."

At one time in his career the writer belonged to the lowly ranks of the book agents.

Preparatory to his work in that pleasant capacity he sat at the feet of a past master in the art of reading human nature. This preceptor laid it down as a fundamental principle of statesmanship that it was much easier to secure orders for delivery and payment at a distant date—for instance, a month away—rather than today or tomorrow.

That it always seems much easier to pay for things in the future than now is the theory of the vampire like "charge account."

If you always pay cash you can get better bargains and you won't be so sorely tempted to buy things you don't really need but think you do because it is so easy to get them without taking any actual money out of your purse at the time.

But the day of reckoning comes around at last and the eggregate of the trifling amounts is sometimes appalling.

The folly of "charging it" has been well brought out by a newspaper cartoon showing a man gaily coasting down the "charge it" toboggan slide and then later trudging slowly, very slowly, and dragging his heavy sled after him as he toils up the hill again.

No one is truly independent who is in debt or whose outgo is not less than his income, leaving him a margin of safety and a balance to put into the bank.

Is this not a timely thought for you to consider at the approach of Independence day?

T. D. MAC GREGOR.

SCRIPTURE

ISAIAH 11:1-9.

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots:

And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of fear of the Lord;

And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears:

But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.

And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den.

They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

Billy Sunday Letters

The Gazette will print in this column letters on both sides of the Billy Sunday question, but reserves the right to pass judgment as to fitness for publication on all letters submitted. All communications must be limited to 250 words, and must bear the name and address of the writer for publication.

BELIEF

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Billy Sunday says he believes the Bible "absolutely." Read Mark 16:16-18. "He that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

If this is evidence of belief, then Billy Sunday stands a very good chance of being damned along with the rest of us poor sinners.

Now, to order a man to believe so and so without substantial evidence is sheer nonsense. "Belief," in the very nature of things, is not susceptible of force or military orders. It is impossible to will a belief in anything. No man can believe that which is unreasonable and therefore unbelievable, and to damn a man because he will not believe that which he cannot believe is as monstrous as it is unjust.

If Billy Sunday would have us believe that he believes in the Bible "absolutely," let him drink a deadly potion of strychnine or prussic acid and let him heal the sick, since these tests are the real and only proof that he believes. If he cannot do these things he is an imposter.

THE REST CURE!

As T. R. Takes It on His Doctor's Orders.

What's all that hurrahing we hear over there?
Who's pulled all that crowd to the stand on the square?
Whose doubled up fist beats the air like a flail,
While his words rise and fall like a November gale?
Who's pointing his finger and thumping his chest?
It's only the colonel—he's taking a rest.

Who's flying about in an automobile
And telling fresh crowds how to get a square deal?
Who's mixing in every political fray
With a yell and a whoop and a hip hip hooray?
Who's splitting the sky with his rallying call?
It's merely the colonel—he's resting, that's all.

Who's plugging for Pinchot in Pennsy one day,
And the next holding Perkins up out of harm's way?
Who's talking from platforms at water tank stations
And devoting his nights to extended orations?
Who's sounding the tocsin from valley and hill?
It's only the colonel—you know he is ill!

"NOTHING TO WEAR"

Miss Flora McFlimsy of Michigan boul.,
In spite of hot weather, is perfectly cool.
She has it all over her namesake, the fair
Miss Flora McFlimsy of Madison square,
Who, ages ago,
As most of you know,
Lamented the fact she had "nothing to wear."
Miss Flora of old bought her dry goods in Paris.
She shopped (you recall) with her friend, Mrs. Harris.

But Flora McFlimsy of Boulevard Mich.
Dispenses with ev'ry superfluous stitch,
And clad in a single diaphanous gown,
Parades in the sunlight, the joy of the town.
"And if I show through,
What harm does it do?"
Says Flora McFlimsy. "I leave it to you."

Why, none whatsoever, we beg to reply.
You are all to the good to our critical eye.
Proceed, Miss McFlimsy, as far as you wish;
Parade in the sunlight on Boulevard Mich.,
And let, if it pleases you, your vanishing dress
Grow fine by degrees and delightfully less,
Until, like the dame
Of evergreen fame,
You really have nothing whatever to wear,
Excepting a hank of remarkable hair.
And should you appear as Lady Godiva,
We'll stand on the corner and hand you a "Viva!"

DIAMOND OF 56 CARATS TO BE AUCTIONED

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

BUENOS AIRES.—The May Eighth, the municipal loan bank of Buenos Aires, is about to sell at public auction three pieces of jewelry, including a string of pearls, a diamond pendant and a diamond [illegible] valued at ½ million dollars.

The largest diamond is 56 carats.

These jewels were left with the bank in October, 1913, as security for a loan of $100,303. The first interest was paid for three months, but since that time there has been no advice from the owner or any attempt to recover the gems.

It is said that these jewels, which comprise the most valuable in the republic, were pawned by the Duke of Orleans, while in South America last year. There are other stories afloat that they came to Buenos Aires by [illegible]

COLLECTING EUGENIC DATA

"How momentous for the nations are the betrothals that are taking place this year!" Davenport exclaimed. Momentous for the nation are the weddings that are taking place this marrying season. About 2,500,000 babies are born each year. About 2,000,000 survive the hazards of infancy. The additions to the population from immigration are large, but the babies born far outnumber them.

The marrying couples are worth thinking about, and enough is now known about the questions of inheritance to make that subject worth while for marrying couples to think about. Nor should thinking about the subject be limited to marrying couples. The marrying fever is liable to break out in the most unexpected places.

Davenport tells us in "Eugenics, Twelve University Lectures," that in the middle of the Eighteenth century John Lowell, as he was graduated from Harvard, vowed he would never marry. No doubt John Lowell meant what he said, but in spite of that John Lowell married three times and from him descended the present president of Harvard, James Russell Lowell, the poet; Gen. Charles Russell Lowel, the soldier; the founder of Lowell, Mass., and its cotton mills; a director of an astronomical observatory; the founder of the Massachusetts General hospital, and many other distinguished public servants.

Fortunately for society the young graduate, John Lowell, had within him a cosmic urge that the plans for his life had overlooked. Marrying concerned him, though he vowed to the contrary.

Let us assume that marrying in our society is a matter of universal concern.

The Eugenics Record office at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., has prepared a schedule for recording family traits. These are sent out upon request. They are to be filled out and returned to the office.

There are in that office about 10,000 family records. Not all, or even a large part of these, have been filled out by people asking advice about matrimony. Only about 2 per cent or one in fifty, of the people who write in for these family trait blanks fill them out.

In only two cases in which marrying was not advised have the parties agreed to accept the advice. This seems a discouragingly small proportion. For the small result several causes are responsible.

First—The people back of the Eugenics Record office. It has never done anything dramatic enough to catch the attention of the general run of men.

Second—There has not been time enough, since eugenics was launched as a constructive program to convince people of its importance. Only a small fraction of the people understand that the program is or can be made general. It is not generally known that this constructive program contemplates the preservation of the family unit and the preservation of the most attractive features of romantic love.

Third—Although the eugenic family tree, as planned by this office, only runs to the grandparents and their descendants, the average person has not the information necessary to fill it out and will not take the trouble to get it. Many of the points inquired about do not stand out in the family mind as did such items as Senator Blank, Millionaire Blank, etc.

Fourth—Some of the information asked for one hesitates to put on record anywhere. The Eugenics Record [illegible] ports designate families by such names as the Nam family, the Hill folk, etc., to prevent unpleasant notoriety. Nevertheless, many people are conservative, and therefore are unwilling to disclose information until such time as years of observation of the record office has reassured them.

The record of 2 per cent of returns to the central office is by no means a measure of the results from sending out the family trait books. The person receiving blanks and instructions as to the information of importance at a time when his mind is concretely on the subject of matrimony will never forget what he reads in that book. He may not write to Cold Spring Harbor, but that does not mean that he will not heed what he has read in the book.

Fifth—Some trouble is required. A great many people who think themselves interested have only a psychological interest. If effort, change in habits or plans or customs is required they drop the matter. To them the prospective gain does not offset the trouble.

Sixth—The rules for guidance which the eugenist can now lay down are too few to make a broad appeal. The subject is a new one. On some points it is possible to speak positively. In a few instances it is possible to say "Thou shalt do" or "Thou shalt not do." But on most of the points that people are interested in it is not possible to say anything one way or the other. This the eugenist knows better than anybody else.

It is to correct these defects that the office has been created, that 10,000 family records have been gathered, and are being studied, that a corps of field workers are investigating, that the proposition to advise as to matrimony has been made.

Davenport is much more definite in his teachings than any of his associates. As to many qualities he speaks with the positiveness of a teacher. More than anyone he follows the plan of a great teacher of obstetrics of 20 years ago, Dr. W. W. Jaggard. Dr. Jaggard was accustomed to say:

"Gentlemen, I tell you this dogmatically to be accepted, not tentatively to be argued."

Davenport, though, after enumerating some 50 or more qualities concerning which eugenics speaks dogmatically, finally said:

"The great work of the future in eugenics is to determine as accurately as possible the law of heredity of each human trait."

It is to this end that these thousands of family trees are being gathered. When eugenics has developed its message it will find the people ready to accept it. In fact, the people will be ready before the message is ready.

I believe it was Sir Francis Galton who suggested the eugenics family tree and the development of a regenerated romantic love around the central idea of family trees. Immediately following his suggestion individuals began keeping life albums in which there would be entered the intimate personal history of individuals, and families began constructing family trees along the lines laid down by Sir Francis.

The Family History Book, issued by the Eugenics Record office as Bulletin No. 7, gives detailed instruction as to how to construct such a family tree. In the record there is a place for an analysis of the capacities, likes, dislikes, [illegible] and other qualities of the individual.

Some day the plan will be modified so as to enter certain desirable qualities with the ease of entry now provided for certain bad qualities. A glance at the plan as now outlined shows that the work has been done by

WHAT THE CHURCH FOLK ARE THINKING ABOUT AND DOING

Sunday School Lesson and Young People's Topics

ORK AND WAGES, OLD ISSUE

International Sunday School Les-on for July 5 is "The Laborers in he Vineyard," Matt. 20:1-16.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

The wage question and the whole ustrial issue is mirrored in the old y told by the world's greatest cher, and is the theme of today's nday school lesson. There are per-exities in the parable as in the facts oday, but there seems to be a clear l out in both cases.

The picture is that of the many who e into the service of the kingdom heaven where the rewards of the st accessions are as great as those the earliest. Thus the nations that e most recently become Christian, the Fiji Islands and Korea, for tance, have partaken of the fruits the gospel even more fully than ancient nations of Europe. The ngest convert may know all the s of Christ service as fully as one o has labored long in the vineyard.

The Burdens of the Boss.

rom the fact that Jesus so often k the standpoint of the employ- in parables like the present one, from the further fact that he so ly handled men, it has been in-red that he was a master carpenter h workmen under him. Certainly understood perfectly the problem of man on whose shoulders rests re-nsibility.

This householder in the story who ded laborers for his vineyard, and o went again and again to the rket place, hiring all he could find, d the same anxiety as has today the mers of western America. He had get in his crop in time. His need labor was as real as the laborer's d for wages. This side of the rable may not be overlooked, for ny of us often fail to recognize perplexities and cares and broad sponsibility to society which em-yers bravely accept as their share the burdens of life. Let us not in-lge in a mad delirium of attack on capital and employers. The man o runs a business is not often a rue; although there are selfish and hless men in business, even as in or unions. This graphic little story m out of the long ago brings with a lesson of tolerance.

The Will to Work.

Some of the laborers in this vine-rd put in a full day's work for as g as daylight lasted. Another batch nt on duty in the middle of the rning, another at noon, another in e middle of the afternoon, and still other within an hour of closing time. l were given the same wage by this nerous employer, grateful because harvest had been gathered.

All were paid a living wage the ion rate. Let us get that clearly in nd. Nobody received less than his e. Those who worked longest could t complain that they were under-d; their only objection was that e late comers were overpaid, which s not a very generous state of mind. The fact was that all the laborers nted work and waited for it, and d the same need of wages. The an taken on at the eleventh hour d as real a need for a day's wages those who had spent the whole day nid the vines. Of course, the mean-g lies on the surface of the parable, at God pays for purpose as well performance. The good we would and cannot is recorded in heaven's dger. Let us be glad that there is higher scale of justice than prevails earth, and that God's standard of hess is not ours.

The parable is a parable of mercy nd not of economics. It portrays e gracious consideration of God, even it reveals the ungenerous and un-ubtedly complaining of the workers the vineyard who were not glad ecause their fellow workmen were ual sharers in their own good for-ne.

A Modern Instance.

When a Detroit automobile manu-cturer recently stirred the world by nnouncing that nobody in his em-oy would receive less than five dol-rs a day, there was widespread criti-sm from other employers who would ot, or could not, pay such a rate. hy should we not all rejoice that me thousands of men are getting en more than they earn? The man ho sweeps the floors of this automo-le factory cannot earn five dollars day according to prevailing stand-rds, any more than the eleventh hour llers in the vineyard could earn their narius.

We search deep into the social un-st of our time when we ask wheth-one man's good fortune, due per-aps to no special merit of his own, f wholly to the generosity of his mployer, or other circumstances, shall ake his less fortunate brother bitter. hy not exult in the grace which gives some far beyond their deserving.

The generous spirit which is sin-erely glad for the prosperity of other eople is a social and national asset f unmeasurable value. There are rave reasons why we should "rejoice ith them that do rejoice." When we take pleasure in our neighbor's good fortune, we not only increase his happiness, but our own as well. Every sentiment of pleasure in another's prosperity enhances our own character. There prevails widely a pernicious habit of jealousy and detraction and envy which is not wholesome. The spirit of good will makes for kingdom character and temporal welfare. This was the clear teaching of Jesus in this parable and in many other places.

Waiting in the Market Place.

America has never been more deeply moved by any economic condition that the resent spectacle of the multitudes of unemployed in our great cities. The conditions has always existed in greater or lesser degree, but our new social conscience has been freshly aroused. The pathos of the multitude crying "No man hath hired us" has reached the innermost of America sentiments.

As a spectacle of sheep without a shepherd they have stirred our compassion, for the clear need of most communities—indeed, of the nation itself—is for a sane and constructive industrial and social leadership, and if it be true that for their own political and pecuniary purposes great corporations have caused a condition of unemployment, then we can only say that they will inevitably face a day of reckoning before God and man.

In this story is a summons to leadership. Chaotic conditions in political and social order and in the industrial realm call men who will show a near and permanent way out. Let us be patient with the reformers whose agitations seem to us radical. Their hearts have been stirred by human injustice, and better their passion a thousand times than any ignoble content with unfair conditions. Meanwhile every man or woman of sanity and perception is called upon to help promote social welfare and solidarity, and to aid both rich and poor to be their best selves and to do their noblest work.

I know a community which came to an extraordinary degree of neighborliness largely through the efforts of one man. He was a promoter of community good will. He created occasions for the neighborhood to realize itself; he spent himself lavishly out of business hours—for he was not a reformer or a preacher or social worker, but merely a good business man—to effect a finer order of society among the people with whom his lot was cast. He sought nothing for himself, yet when business called him away from that town the loss was realized by all observing people as a great and increasing one. That one man had meant more to his community than any institution or business within its borders, yet the work of social leadership which he did in promoting good will and mutual helpfulness and civic betterment was possible to any man who would give himself unsparingly to the service of his fellows.

Adjusting Final Values.

This story contains a question of work rather than a question of wages. They who work for work's sake will never want for wages. Highest service is never done for money. A man cannot be a missionary for the salary he gets, nor a patriot for wages. When pay is put first, work is sure to be secondary in more ways than one. The quibbler over what he may get out of a service is sure to be the one who renders least service.

In the highest economy willingness and readiness count on a par with services itself. The men in the market place were eager to toil and ready to be employed. Shall these be denied their meed of sustenance?

Jesus applied the parable to one of his favorite themes, that because men have not opportunity they shall not be denied reward. The last shall be first and the first last. A final readjustment will be equitable in both worlds.

FINDING AND KEEPING A FRIEND

Terse comments on the Uniform Prayer Meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies—Christian Endeavor, etc.—for July 5. "Twelve Great Verses. VII, The Friendship Verse." Prov. 27:9.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Wise old Francis Bacon, that master of knowledge which he failed to practice, sums up his Essay on Friendship in a closing epigram: "When a man cannot fitly play his own part, if he have not a friend, he may quit the stage." That is to say, unless one be extraordinarily self-contained and self-reliant, he needs a friend to fill out his life and to make his abilities effective. Viewed from the truly Baconian standpoint of selfishness and utility, a friend is indispensable. Even the old philosopher saw, however, that the first office of a friend is to receive the outpourings of one's heart. To have one to whom the life may reveal itself in fullest intimacy and confidence is to know the highest office of friendship. The famous words of Bacon have often been quoted: This communicating of a man's self to his friend, works two contrary effects; for it redoubleth joys, and cutteth grief in half. For there is no man that imparteth his joys to his friend, but he joyeth the more; and no man that imparteth his griefs to his friend, but he grieveth the less."

The ancients had a saying that "a man's friend is his other self."

Not always is it possible to have a friend; but to everybody it is possible to be a friend. And that is the highest quality of friendship. The richest rewards of this noblest of human offices come not to him who sets, but to him who gives. The art of having a friend is entirely subordinate to the greater art of being a friend. What a scope for our noblest powers is offered by the task of being a great friend—great in service? To become a college graduate requires patience, toil and knowledge; but all these qualities, and more, are needed, and in greater degree, in exercise of friendship. Whoever undertakes to be a perfect friend has a life work mapped out for him.

Only by friendliness do we win friends. This reward waits on worth. "He who would have friends must show himself friendly."

The dry fodder of criticism is poor food for the nourishment of a friendship.

One of the mighty words of Jesus is "Ye are my friends;" "I have not called you servants, but friends." He is as he was, the real friend—the close, congenial, communing companion—of all who enter the circle of intimacy on his terms. Abraham was marked as "The friend of God." We who are so much less than Abraham may yet be, in a real and personal sense unknown to the patriarch who communed with the unseen, the true friends of God's sent son, our Savior. That friendship on earth is the beginning of heaven.

The best friend is the one who helps us to be our best self. That is a test for friendship.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him, yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?
—Anon.

"A friend loveth at all times." That is the hall mark of true friendship. It weathers the storms. When a Calvary is in sight, it does not flee to safety. Even though the qualities of friendliness which first called it forth may disappear, friendship stands sure. Shakespeare echoed the truth when he said:

"That is not love which altereth
When it alteration finds."

This is not a mere sentimental truth, useful for poets and books of motoes. It is profoundly practical in its present-day application. Our divorce courts would be almost emptied if men and women would learn to keep their vows of loyalty, which mirror the reiterated truth of the Bible that, "A friend loveth at all times;" "Many waters cannot quench love;" "Love is strong as death;" "Love never faileth."

Friends are not best because they're merely old.
—S. Weir Mitchell.

A noble friendship is a higher education.

Like sand in the bearings of a machine, so is petty fault-finding in the delicate workings of a friendship. More marriages have been wrecked by nagging than by infidelity.

I could not love thee, dear, so much,
Loved I not honor more.

The highest friendship is true to the highest ideals. That is why Christian friendships, those which hold in common a love for Christ and a loyalty to his truth, grow to richest perfection. Friends should hold in common the best things; thus earthly loves are sanctified and strengthened by the love of God; and the friends of God make the best friends of men.

SEVEN SENTENCE SERMONS

Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

Proclaim we are glad we were born in a land
The best that is under the sky,
And are proud of that truly American day,
The Fourth of July.
—Minna Irving.

As it is cowardly for a soldier to run away from battle, so it is cowardly for any citizen not to contribute his share to the well-being of his country.—George Harvey.

And this day shall be unto you for a memorial, and ye shall keep it a feast to Jehovah: throughout your generations ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever.—Ex. 12:14.

Blue and white and crimson it shines
Over the thinned and tottering lines.
Hats off!
The colors before us fly;
But more than the flag is passing by.
—Henry Holcomb Bennett.

Oh beautiful for patriots' dream,
That sees beyond the years,
Thine alabaster cities gleam
Undimmed by human tears.

America! America!
God shed His grace on thine,
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea.

ONE WAY TO EAT ASPARGUS

From the Milwaukee Journal.

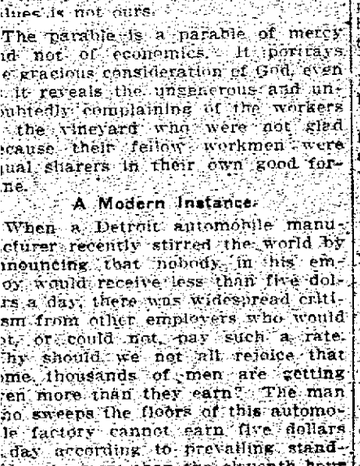

How to eat asparagus. This is a problem as tremendous as how to eat an orange, Ivan Heald, in the London Daily Express, gives some advice on the point.

"Rest one elbow," he says, "on the cloth and wrap one leg around the leg of the table so as to prevent overbalancing. Grip the asparagus and rub its neck in the melted butter. Before it has time to make up its mind which way it will wobble, swing the asparagus off its feet, and waggle it in the air to test its pliability. Then open your mouth and make a feint at biting your stalk in the small of the back.

"Ten to one the asparagus will try to dodge by doubling up. You get him as his head comes down, and there you are.

U.S. AVIATION CORPS TO BE STRENGTHENED

Hay Bill Provides This Branch of Service Will Be Greatly Enlarged

By JONATHAN WINFIELD

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The United States, having given the world the science of aviation in the inventions of the Wrights, is now about to take its place among the world forces in air power.

As the result of the Hay bill, which has passed the house and has been favorably reported to the senate by the committee on military affairs, the United States is to have an army aviation corps which will be able to uphold the honor of the Stars and Stripes in any conflict instead of only the germ of an air fleet.

At the present time the army aviation corps, under the direction of Col. Samuel Reber, though a compact and essentially efficient body and capable of giving a maximum amount of service with a minimum of equipment, is infinitesimal as compared with the like organizations of other first-class powers. In fact, it is only through the Hay bill that the aviation corps has been given a separate status from the signal corps with which it has previously been affiliated.

U. S. Has No Dirigibles.

The United States has nothing in the line of fighting apparatus for use in the air with the exception of aeroplanes, not a single dirigible balloon or other lighter-than-air vessel which might be used for offensive work. France alone maintains a fleet of 220 balloons and dirigibles, while Germany and Austria are not far behind.

The American fleet of aeroplanes, now divided into four sections, is located at Galveston, Tex.; San Diego, Cal., and in Hawaii and the Philippines. These airships are used only for scouting, but they will form the nucleus for a great fleet of "wasps of war."

As Colonel Reber recently said:

"We must start by perfecting our scouting system, as a child first learns to crawl. After that he may take up walking, and before long he will be prepared for running. Running in this case means that we will have a full fleet of offensive airships."

Hydroaeroplanes Successful.

The aeroplanes' work during the present trouble with Mexico has been entirely in the hands of the navy hydroaeroplane force and has been very successful. The army force of aeroplanes, with the exception of those in Hawaii and the Philippines, has been maintained exclusively on the border.

Under the Hay bill the aviation section of the army will consist of not over 60 commissioned line officers, with rank below that of captain, as well as 260 enlisted men. These will be detailed for periods of not more than four years. The officers, who will first go through a course as aviation students, will be selected on the recommendation of the chief signal officer from among the unmarried lieutenants of the army who are not over 30 years of age. There is a provision in the bill, however, that no man shall be forced to serve in this branch of the service against his will.

It is further provided, on account of the extremely hazardous nature of the work, that each aviation student shall receive increased pay, the same percentage of increase applying to the enlisted men as to the officers.

Tests Will Be Severe.

After the passage of the Hay bill only officers and men who have passed an examination before a board composed of three officers experienced in aviation and two medical officers may be admitted to the aviation corps. This medical examination will be particularly severe. The condition of the heart when exposed to high altitude is examined and the severest tests of vision and hearing, as well as sense of balance, are to be imposed.

Even after they have succeeded in passing all these tests the actual work is likely to develop nervousness, which renders disqualification necessary before the student stage has passed.

JOHN CLAFLIN

Head of the defunct H. B. Claflin company, a $9,000,000 corporation, and one of the foremost dry goods firms in the United States. Claflin stated that the receivership had become necessary because the expansion of the business had increased capital requirements to such that the company could not meet.

There Is No Radical Type of Mind, Says Dr. Farrand of Boulder

BOULDER, July 4.—There is no racial type of mind, asserted Dr. Livingston Farrand, formerly of Columbia university, New York, now president of the University of Colorado, at the Colorado Sociological conference today.

Dr. Farrand spoke on the question, "Is there an American type of mind?"

"If anthropology shows anything," he said, "it shows that we have no such thing as a pure type in the world today.

"White, yellow, black—there is no pure type; and the white race is the most uncertain of all. We have less permanency of type than the negro."

ESPERANTO

THE FORMATON OF WORDS

So long a time has passed since this column contained an article on grammar as to give rise to the suggestion that some explanation of the means by which Esperanto study is made so much easier than that of any other language may again be timely.

It was the idea of Zamenhof, the inventor of the international language, to use only a single form for each word so that that which was found upon a page of reading matter should also be seen in the vocabulary, without modification, and therefore instantly recognizable. Appreciating, however, the advantages of inflection, and the fact that its use would be customary to every student of the new idiom, he contrived to make the necessary termination capable of being affixed to the main word, or root, so that from his original point of view the root and the termination are two distinct words, merely conjoined to one another without change of termination. Thus akv expresses the idea of water, while the letter o is a word signifying "substance" and "a" another signifying "quality;" so that akvo becomes the substantive, "water," while akva is the adjective expressed in English by the same word, as when we say "a water wagon," "a water flow." The last is in Esperanto akva fluo, which, by analysis, means "water, quality, flow, substance;" or, "a flowing substance of watery character." Terminations of plurals and of case are similarly made, thus bird in Esperanto means the same as in English, but when we speak of a single bird we use the form birdo (since "bird" is a substantive); and when two or more birds are mentioned, annex the j, meaning "multitude," thus birdoj (pronounced burdov) is "birds." The affix n, appended in either form, gives the added idea of the object of an action or motion. Thus, "mi vidas nigran birdon," "I see a black bird;" "min vidas bluaj birdoj," "blue birds see me"—the sense not depending, as in English, upon the order in which the words are placed.

It is not surprising that four forms are able to cover the entire inflection of a noun or of an adjective; but it must be regarded as remarkable that all the modifications of meaning expressed in the conjugation of a verb (exclusive of the participle) are provided for by a half-dozen terminations, each of them in theory an appended word. The burden of expressing the person and number is thrown upon the pronoun or noun which forms the subject of the sentence; the verb is required to show only the time of the action, and whether it is stated conditionally, imperatively, or without either of the modes. Thus "mi vidas vin," "I see you;" "vi vidis min"—which may as well be "min vidis vi"—"you saw me;" "vi vidos mian fraton," "you shall see my brother;" "vidu lin," "see him;" "se vi vidus lin, vi vidus ankau min," "if you had seen him, you would have seen me too;" "auhon vidi estas agrable," "it is pleasant to see the sun." The verb "esti," "to be," is the only auxiliary required, and by its aid, in combination with participles, not only the passive voice, but various shades of meaning which occur when the verb is used actively, are expressed with great delicacy and precision.

This principle of appended words is extended much beyond the field of inflection, to produce compounds and derivations, whose meaning becomes evident to the eye of the Esperanto reader, even if he has never seen them in that particular combination before. This is in fact one of the greatest conveniences with which the language is furnished, but its discussion opens up too large a field for the present article.

These new mortars, the most powerful ever built, have a range of 11 miles and can send a shell five miles high, to drop with terrific velocity on the deck on an enemy's ship. These guns are shown in several views appearing in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Churches Get Busy on Japanese Question

Federal Council Takes Radical Step in Pending Political and International Issue; Grave Consequences Possible; Commission of Eminent Churchmen Appointed to Consider Relations Between America and Japan; To Take Up Whole Race Issue

BY THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER

Something radically, perhaps dangerously, new in American church life is the appointment of a commission by the federal council of the churches of Christ in America, acting in the name of 30 denominations and 17,000,000 Protestant church members, on American relations with Japan.

Just what effect this may have upon the pending negotiations between the two nations is difficult to say, although as the commission starts out with a pro-Japanese objective, it is likely in some quarters that Japan will be unduly heartened in her contention for certain political and civil rights for her nationals in this country.

The appointment of the commission is avowedly due to pressure brought to bear from Americans resident in Japan.

Even more delicate is the question of how the appointment of this commission will be received by the constituent churches of the federal council. Some denominations, like the Southern Presbyterian, stand so rigidly for the separation of the church and state, that they are likely to be affronted by this open activity of the federal council in a question which, in its present form at least is political. Also, it is to be feared that the rank and file of most of the denominations are not in hearty accord with those missionary leaders and other churchmen, who are willing to conciliate Japan at the sacrifice of America's rights in the case. One of the most difficult phases of Christian missions that has arisen in late years is the tendency of some persons to retain the good will of certain Asiatic powers at almost any cost. This was conspicuously illustrated by the unwillingness of certain eminent missionary leaders to speak a word in behalf of the Korean Christians who were imprisoned and tortured by the Japanese administration in Korea.

The Call From Japan.

That missionaries in Japan should feel concerned over the Japanese resentment toward America is natural, as it affects their work. They are constantly under its pressure. The one Japanese mission which has gone farthest in taking the Japanese viewpoint is that of the American board, which a year ago adopted a set of resolutions sent to the religious press of this country, and to the federal council of churches.

This memorial declared, "The effective proclamation of the gospel in the kingdom in Japan depends closely on the maintenance of friendly relations between the people of Japan and the United States." The memorial asked the federal council that it appoint a commission to study the question, and that it seek to rally the Christian forces of the United States for the solution of this problem and for the promotion of such measures as are in accord with the highest standards of Christian statesmanship."

An Apostle of Peace.

Following hard on the heels of the memorial came Dr. Sidney L. Gulick of the American board's Japan mission. Dr. Gulick was at once appointed by the federal council to speak in its behalf wherever he could get a hearing throughout the country, and he addressed audiences in many of the larger American cities. He also interviewed the president, the secretary of state and members of the foreign relations committee of both houses of congress. Dr. Gulick had an original idea for the regulation of immigration which he thought would not seem to discriminate against Japan. Naturally, his plea is for Japan's sake.

Only they who live in the Japanese empire and know the sensitiveness of the Japanese people, who wear their national pride as an exposed nerve, can understand how grave the present question is when viewed from the western side of the Pacific. Those who know most about it say that the subject is even more perturbing to the administration than the Mexican question.

The New Commission.

Professor Gulick will continue his labor as an apostle of peace under the auspices of the federal council's commission on relations with Japan, having been released by the American board for this purpose. This commission purposes to make a study of the case. The official statement of the appointment of the commission says, "The first duty of the commission is to get at the exact facts. Only after careful examination will it attempt to formulate a policy or program, should such seem to be needed.

"The so-called Japanese problem is but one phase of the vastly larger and more important question of the contact of the races. The commission proposes to look at this whole question in the largest and most statesmanlike manner."

The men intrusted with this unprecedented task of offering to the government, on behalf of the churches, a solution for a delicate political issue, are well-known internationalists. The 15 members appointed are:

Rev. Charles R. Brown, Prof. Charles R. Henderson, Hamilton Holt, Rev. Albert G. Lawson, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Rev. Frank Mason North, Robert E. Speer, Rev. William I. Haven, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks, Rev. Frederick Lynch, John R. Mott, Rev. Doremus Scudder, Pres. George E. Vincent and Hon. Amos P. Wilder.

Stating Japan's Side.

The Pacific coast and the south are yet to be heard from on this new proposition of the federal council of churches. Whether, in view of the pro-Japanese sympathies of many of the men on the commission and of its representative, Dr. Gulick, they will regard this as one more successful effort on the part of the Japanese government to press agent its own side of the case; or whether they will deem the procedure to be one that falls within the province of the associated churches of the country, remains to be seen. Certainly, this commission and its work will be watched more closely than anything the federal council has yet attempted. The only question is how the project is to be received in America. There is no doubt about Japan's welcome of the new plan. The official statement put out by the federal council frankly avows, "Not only will this new undertaking of the federal council be welcomed by the Christians of Japan, but Japan's statesmen, educators editors, and indeed the rank and file of the people will welcome it as a sign of the earnest intention of the best elements of our nation, first to know the exact situation, and then to do the right thing. It will be regarded thus as an evidence of real friendship between our people."

Certainly, all Christians and all broad-minded citizens will welcome whatever makes for good will between nations, while at the same time conserving the rights of all parties concerned.

How to Keep Well

men whose chief interest has been in the abnormal.

We find a key in which 15 inheritable desirable attributes are to be noted by a single letter: A, alcoholic, decidedly intemperate; B, blind; C, criminalistic; D, deaf; E, epileptic; F, feeble minded; G, gonorrheal; I, insane; M, migrainous; Ne, neurotic; P, paralytic; S, syphilitic; Sx, sexual immoral; T, tubercular; V, vagrant, tramp, confirmed runaway.

In this list there is one symbol for the desirable—N, normal—and one to designate an infection that is not inheritable—G, gonorrheal.

Further analysis is necessary in many of these entries, and therefore such suggestions that the capital I for insanity should be modified, as, for instance, Is, senile dementia; Ig, general paresis; Ip, paranoia; as these differ in their importance from the inheritance standpoint.

Davenport tells us that in this country there are aristocratic families, such as the Harrisons, statesmen; the Morgans, financiers; the Edwards and Dwights, scholars; the Wilkinsons, inventors; the Lees, soldiers; the Hulls and Footes, sailors; the Jeffersons, actors.

There are cacogenic families, such as the Jukes, Ishmaelites, Nams, Hill folk, and Kallikaks, a large portion of whose descendants manifest criminality or some other evidence of subnormality.

If one marries into one group the majority of the offspring will be a source of happiness to the family. If one marries into the other group a majority of the offspring will be a source of misery to the family.

Some of the inheritance relations of the above have been well worked out. Some have not.

The blood will clear itself of any inheritance in four generations. This statement requires some modification. There are a few qualities that cannot be bred out. Those are pretty well understood. They conform to developed principles of Mendel's law.

Occasionally a quality will appear that has not appeared elsewhere in the family tree which goes back three generations—to the great grandparent. In such case the Family History Book tells us the searcher delving farther back will find some forerunner.

These are the exceptions; the rule is that four generations is enough. In some instances it is more than enough. For instance, gonorrheal infections are usually included. This infection produces sterility, causes blindness in the newly born child, and in other ways is related, but in no proper sense has it inheritance features. Two generations clears the stock of both the infection and the effects of the infection.

Syphilis, on the other hand, extends, "even unto the third generation," but not beyond that. Alcoholism, epilepsy, insanity, migraine, wanderlust, tuberculosis, neurasthenia, are qualities from which the stock clears itself by the fourth generation, if given any chance.

The tendency to normal mind, normal stamina, normal resistance, to epileptic convulsions, to a certain color of skin and eyes is marked. It is called a dominant. Even though an abnormality in any one of these qualities should be introduced in the next generation it would be half gone, and in the third generation it would have disappeared for all practical purposes.

In hereditary ataxia, astigmatism, otosclerosis (a for of deafness), Thomson's disease and nonresistance to consumption, the normal is the dominant, and the abnormal does not last beyond the Biblical teaching that "the sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children even unto the third and fourth generations."

Certain abnormal conditions are dominants. For them three or four generations will not clean the blood. Among these are Huntington's chorea, cataract, ptosis of the eyelid, night blindness and extra toes and fingers.

Sex-limited traits tend to disappear spontaneously if certain rules of mating are observed. They tend to be indefinitely perpetuated, if the rules are not observed. Among the self-limited traits are color blindness, atrophy of the optic nerve, hemophilia, muscular atrophy, multiple sclerosis, nystagmus and myopia.

This is only a beginning. The Eubenics Record office will not succeed until it offers a program with a broader appeal. That it may do so it is piling up studies.

CONGRESSMEN FLOOD MAIL WITH LETTERS TO RETAIN POSITIONS

Thousands of Circulars Are Going to "Folks Back Home" These Days

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Indicating the perturbed state of mind of many members of the house of representatives who have stiff fights for renomination and reelection, but who are tied down in Washington by another all-summer session, there are thousands of circular letters going out of this city every day to "my dear friend and constituent."

Over in the house office building an electric mimeograph machine keeps busy grinding out letters from various congressmen to their various districts. Congressman Bump engages the mimeograph force one day and Congressman Trump keeps the force busy the next day, and so on.

The letters are pretty much alike and they show a general uneasiness among members who want to stay on Uncle Sam's payroll and who "view with alarm" the activities of some aspiring candidate who is shelling the woods back home telling the voters why their favorite statesman should be retired.

Pleads for Job.

One of the scared members of the house, whose name must be withheld under the sad circumstances, recently mailed out a typical letter begging his constituents not to give the job away to another fellow, and reminding them that he, their congressman, cannot pay a personal visit to the district because "I must remain at my post here in Washington to look out for your interests."

This member used about 500 words in his plea and ran the gamut of appeal from the candidate's viewpoint. He pointed with great pride to everything his party has done and informed his constituents that their representative had had a hand in working great reforms.

Hundreds of thousands of voters throughout the United States are receiving letters of this character nowadays. It is the result of the all-summer session, the president's dictum that congress must remain here in Washington and pass trust bills before adjournment. Every member of the house must face a campaign next fall and probably three-fourths of the members of the house prefer to be back home now combating the claims of rival candidates.

Spends $1,400 in Postage.

If a member skips away, however, he is recorded as "absent" on the house roll calls and he thereby furnishes additional ammunition for his opponent. Consequently, the average member compromises by staying in Washington and keeping the mimeograph busy.

One frightened member of the house recently confessed that he has already spent $1,400 for postage alone and his campaign is but fairly launched. Dozens of members have mailing forces of from three to six girls at work, and every voter in the district not only gets a letter but many letters in the several months prior to the balloting.

Altogether the long session in a campaign year is an expensive proposition for the average house member, and the art of letter writing has developed here to a remarkable extent since it became apparent that dutiful members of congress must conduct a long distance campaign for reelection.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

WE EAT TOO MUCH MEAT WHICH CLOGS KIDNEYS THEN THE BACK HURTS

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lot of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Adv.

CALCUTTA TURF CLUB DECIDES TO BAR FAKIRS FROM RACES

WILL NOT ALLOW REPETITION OF RECENT SPECTACLE IN ENGLISH DERBY; ENGLAND NOW CLAIMS TO BE EFFETE COUNTRY

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, July 4.—It seems certain that drastic steps will be taken by the Calcutta (India) Turf club to prevent a repetition of the recent debacle in the Derby, England's greatest annual horse race. It will be remembered that this year's race was won by a French horse, Durbar II, owned by the American, Mr. H. Naylor, and the fact that Durbar II failed dismally in the French Derby, and subsequent to the English event, is served to emphasize the opinion that the unwieldy proportions of the field had something to do with the failure of the crack English horses.

No fewer than 30 horses started in the race and only a dozen of them had no earthly chance of winning. Why their owners should pay the running fee of $1,250 was not apparent, and seemingly a suicidal waste of money. The crowding of these horses at the starting gate caused absolute chaos and finally the favorite and other heavily backed horses were left at the post and were pit clean out of the race.

Inquiries Made.

Exhaustive inquiries were instituted by the Jocky club, the controlling turf body in England, and I understand that they have fairly conclusive evidence that several of the horses were run as a result of secret financial arrangements between the owners and holders of tickets in the Calcutta sweepstake. This lottery, the greatest of its kind in the world, is controlled by the Calcutta Turf club, and the first prize is never less than a quarter of a million dollars. Huge prizes go to the drawers of the second and third horses, and there are consolation prizes of $2,500 for the holder of a ticket which secures a starter.

The Jocky club has given exhaustive attention to the subject, and has had conversations with stewards of the Calcutta Turf club. The latter body has the matter under consideration and has promised to omit clauses in the rules of the sweepstake which might lend an inducement to owners to run horses which otherwise might not be started.

What happened, I understand, was this. The holder of a ticket drawing a horse entered in the race was approached. "I've drawn your horse. If it starts I get $2,500. I'll give you half if you start it and if it wins you can have $50,000 out of the prize money." An authority on these matters tells me that it is likely that the Calcutta Turf club will refrain from cabling to people successful in the draw until it is too late for them to make any secret arrangements with owners of horses in the race.

England Effete Country.

England is an effete country, seaside municipalities are telling us every day. There is no gaiety, no real life, and the solution seems to lie in the Americanizing and continentalizing of these pleasure spots. As befits London's most popular seaside resort, Brighton has started first in the reform race. Chalets for male and female uses have been erected all along the seashore and in the shops you can see Mexican bathing suits of startling colors. These, we are told, come direct from Atlantic City, whence comes another innovation to be tried here shortly. These are floats about twice the size of afternoon tea tables, around which bathers, with the salt water lapping their chins, may swim and enjoy the cup that cheers but does not inebriate. Nobody at Brighton has worn the Mexican suit yet, but the lack of enterprise is due to modesty which will disappear in quick time when the Cockney girls take their annual vacation.

First Policewoman.

Bolton, a populous industrial center in the north of England, has taken the lead in the appointment of the first policewoman in England. She is to render assistance to the police under the direction of chief constable at the "princely" salary of $100 a year, though this will be augmented by her stipend as assistant probation officer. Bolton's policewoman's chief duties are to collect evidence in cases in which girls and young women are concerned and to exercise certain supervision over girls who have been before the magistrate. The chief constable says he will utilize his new assistant for this purpose because he believes it better to prevent them sinking than to watch them do so and then punish them.

London, too, will soon have its policewomen. A bill authorizing their appointment is now before parliament, and it is backed by members of all parties.

DECIDING VOTE

In a business men's club in a western town there sprang up two factions, one which criticised the steward because he did not provide the members with good meals and one which defended him hotly.

The dispute got fiercer and fiercer. Half the club wanted to fire the steward at once. The other half said he was efficient.

Then, without warning, the steward himself decided the momentous question.

One day at lunch time a member of the club asked the waiter:

"Where's the steward?"

"He ain't here," replied the waiter. "He said he was going down the street to get something good to eat."

ZOOZ BATTER THREE KNIGHT PITCHERS IN MUD BATTLE, ENDING WITH SCORE 17 TO 4

Geiser Appears in Role of Star and Fusick Is in Fine Form; Same Teams Meet Today

A leaky sky that caused the game to stretch out over three hours and made the diamond a small lake, seemed to inject new life into the Zooz yesterday, and the way they went after the Knights of Columbus was an agreeable surprise. The locals amassed 15 hits, two of which were homeruns with men on the cushions, and four were doubles. Three of the enemy's pitchers were battered and every inning saw Zooz runs hung up on the board. The final score was 17 to 4.

A splashy inning, in which the Zooz pulled some queer manipulation of pitchers, gave the Knights their runs. Fusick wanted to keep his fin dry during the third reel and sent Clark to the box. The two bases on balls made up Clark's contribution and then Lomax was ordered to the hill. Two hits off of the young marster and a wild throw by Vernon, who tried to catch a runner at third, gave the Catholics four runs.

Before and after the third frame Fusick was complete master of the situation and only five hits were registered off of his delivery. He was afforded the best support of the season, despite the rain, and he displayed his appreciation by flinging right ball with a wet horsehide. A homerun that brought in two scores and two singles were his contributions to the hit column.

Geiser at Home Again.

Jake Geiser, playing in right field, was one of the game's stars. He pulled down two hard flies and knocked the ball for two hits, one of them a circuit punch into the timber. Geiser is too valuable a man to lose from the team and he will probably be kept in right field. Counts was in his stall at third and only had one chance, which he accepted without a bobble. He got three hits and if Manager Colburn can keep him on the club he will have a good man, as the fans all know.

None of the Knight pitchers seemed to be able to get going right. The wet weather and a soggy ball added to their grief and they were unable to stop the pillage at any stage. Cain, an overgrown boy, hurled for the first three innings but was succeeded by Birch, a Fort Logan soldier who loaned his services to the Knights for Independence day. Birch struck the wet zone and was mauled unmercifully, and he gave way to Lang, who received similar treatment.

The double umpire system was tried for three innings. After the fifth, Floyd, whom the Knights brought with them for the purpose, umpired alone and Sam Goshen watched the battle from the grandstand. In the third inning Goshen was umps on balls and strikes. Floyd was supposed to be the judge of field decisions. Leisenring, on an attempt to get home from second, was interfered with by a coacher—Floyd was busy watching the other bases. Goshen saw the misplay at third and called Leisenring out. The Knights protested that Goshen had nothing to do whatever with anything but what occurred at the platter. They fought about it for a quarter of an hour and finally Goshen threw up his job in disgust, and he can't be blamed. An umpire at the Zoo has the real job. He has to be a diplomat, a prize fighter a lawyer, a preacher and insane to please the fans. If he keeps it up long he certainly will fill the last bill of this list. The whole trouble is that the umpire has no authority to enforce his decisions and kick players off the field who get too athletic with their lungs.

Hitting the Sawdust Trail.

The game was halted on three occasions to let the rain do its damage. Sawdust was sprinkled around the plate but both that and the pitcher's mound were mighty soggy. As a result the players were pretty well bespattered when they left the game.

Three locals hit the sawdust trail in the first inning on four hits. In the second Fowler scored from third on a squeeze play and two bases on balls, an error and a hit gave them three more in the third. In the fourth, Geiser's homerun with two men on bases gave three more. In the sixth Fusick's four-base smash over the left field fence scored himself and Hastings. Fowler got a base on balls but was caught trying to steal home. Vernon knocked a high fly into right field that Cain caught on the stomach and failed to hold. Fusick got a hit in the eighth. In the seventh with Geiser on base, Schneider drove a hard one to the score board and scored when Counts pasted one through Joe Ryan at third. Fowler's double scored Fusick in the eighth and Fowler himself scored when Carden's slow bunt went awry.

Bases on balls contributed largely to the scores of the locals. In every inning but two the locals made two or more runs, and every Knight pitcher was free with passes.

The same teams meet again this afternoon at 2:15, Lomax or Ackley facing Wilson. The Bloomer Girls are on the local schedule for Wednesday.

CHIP KNOCKS OUT MURRAY IN 15TH ROUND

Rivers Puts Matty McCue to Sleep in Second

CROSS' DECISION OVER WATSON UNPOPULAR

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—George Chip of Newcastle, Pa., aspirant to the middleweight championship, knocked out "Fighting Billy" Murray of Petaluma, Cal., here today in the fifteenth round of their scheduled 20-round fight. Coming out of a clinch Chip shot three terrific right hooks to the Californian's jaw. Murray's arms dropped to his sides, his eyes closed and as he crumpled Chip caught him flush on the jaw with a heavy left uppercut. It was fully two minutes after he had been counted out that Murray was revived.

Murray led by a good margin until the eleventh round, outboxing and outfighting his hard hitting opponent. He staggered Chip in the second round with a straight left to the jaw and in the seventh and eighth the easterner was in distress.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Joe Rivers, the Los Angeles lightweight, defeated Matty McCue, of Racine, Wis., in the second round of their fight at Vernon arena today. Rivers knocked McCue down in the first round. In the second a blow to the jaw sent McCue to the floor again, and while the referee counted McCue's seconds threw a towel into the ring in token of defeat.

McCue did little except try to cover up, while Rivers easily broke down weak defense of the easterner.

The first time McCue went to the canvas, he smiled at Rivers and rubbed his jaw. The second time, he again stroked his jaw, but the smile was absent. He sat still while the referee counted to six, when his manager threw a sponge into the ring. Then he cried out: "He didn't knock me out! He didn't knock me out!"

The men entered the ring at catchweights, with Rivers the heavier by two or three pounds. McCue looked scared from the beginning. He had been substituted for Ad Wolgast, who broke his arm in training.

SAN DIEGO, July 4.—Leach Cross won a decision over Red Watson in the 20-round right here this afternoon. The decision of Referee Jack Root was unpopular with the crowd, which was favorable to a draw. Both boys were in good condition at the end.

CANTON, O., July 4.—Jack Britton of Chicago defeated Johnny Griffith of Akron, O., in a hot 12-round battle today. There was no decision, but the popular verdict was for Britton.

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Joe Mandot of New Orleans and Johnny Dundee of New York fought a 10-round draw here today according to a newspaper decision.

SUPERIOR, Wis., July 4.—Pal Brown of Hibbing, Minn., was given the newspaper decision over Frank Whitney of Cedar Rapids, Ia., in a rather slow 10-round bout here tonight.

FORT SMITH, Ark., July 4.—Carl Morris of Sapulpa, Okla., stopped Al Kubiak of Michigan in the sixth round of their scheduled 10-round bout here today.

MURPHY SHADES PUEBLOAN; WILL MEET LEONARD

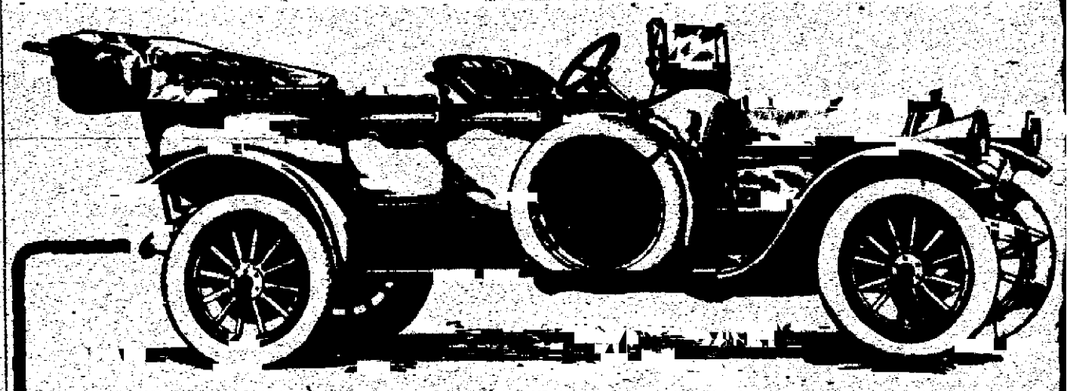

SCRAP AT RAMONA IS A FAST ONE, TWO GOOD PRELIMINARIES

In a whirlwind hammer-and-tongs affair at the open air arena at Ramona last night, Frankie Murphy of Denver defeated Young O'Brien of Pueblo in 10 fast rounds. The men are bantamweights. Murphy was the aggressor throughout the scrap and was much stronger at the finish, but his opponent never faltered and the fighting was fast and clean. About 250 people saw the match, which is the first of a series that will be staged at Ramona.

Alex Day, manager of Nat Leonard, challenged Murphy for a scrap in the near future. The challenge was accepted and a date will be set this week for the encounter.

George Betee and Mack Ryan fought five fast rounds in the first preliminary, with honors even. Harry Goldie, outweighing Johnny Brewer about 12 pounds, looked better at the finish of six rounds. This bout was filled with hard blows and clever blocking.

Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Kessler are riding a motorcycle from Palm Beach, Fla., to Portland, Me. Next year they plan to motor to California, following the route which E. G. Baker used on his record-breaking dash across the continent.

CHARLIE WHITE AND STANLEY YOAKUM TO FIGHT FOR LIGHTWEIGHT HONORS IN DENVER ON JULY 14

Denver Contender Is Best Developed in Class Since the Days of Young Corbett.

BY ABE POLLOCK.
America's Foremost Referee.

THROUGH the efforts of the Rocky Mountain News, one of the greatest twenty-round battles ever staged in the Western country has been brought to a successful culmination, and is now an assured fact. Articles have been signed by all parties directly concerned, and the battle will be presented July 14, during the Elks' convention, when there will be approximately 80,000 visitors in Denver.

Charlie White, premier lightweight of the world, if not champion, although he has a champion's scalp dangling at his pugilistic belt, has been matched in a bout of twenty rounds with Stanley Yoakum, the best 133-pound fighter the West has produced since the days of Young Corbett. Both White and Yoakum, together with Cal Chesire, in behalf of the State Athletic club, have posted forfeits to the amount of $2,000 with The Rocky Mountain News to bind the match and fulfill all agreements.

The promoters have gone to the expense of nearly $8,000 to bring this match to Denver while the Elks are holding their annual reunion, and railroads will run specials at reduced rates, to give the people in different parts of the country an opportunity of witnessing the battle of a lifetime between two natural fighters of types as different as the two poles.

CHARLIE WHITE, born and bred in a city and working up from a slender young boy, who started boxing to save himself from what the doctors and his parents thought were the first stages of tuberculosis, will be pitted against Stanley Yoakum, known as a "caveman," a product of the hardest race on earth the French-Canadian. Yoakum has lived practically his whole life in the open on ranches in the West. He has developed into a great fighter, a rugged, young fellow without the word fear in his vocabulary.

As a study of fighting types this battle will be without parallel in ring circles, and fans and public alike will have a chance to witness a contest of brains versus brawn that any promoter in the country would give his right eye to stage.

Charlie White is of Hebrew parentage. He was born in Liverpool, March 25, 1891. His family name is Charlie Anchowitz. He stands 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 132 pounds in fighting trim. He started his ring career in 1907, when he was only 16 years old, and in the number of years he has been boxing has met and defeated all the best men in the lightweight and featherweight divisions. His victories have been mostly on points until about a year ago, when he developed a punch in his left hand that flattened out his opponents one after the other as fast as they came.

It brought him finally into direct contact with the champion himself, Willie Ritchie, whom he met in Milwaukee May 26 this year and for ten rounds gave him the most artistic lacing ever witnessed in a prize ring. Ritchie still retains the title, but it is by White's consent and nothing more.

Ad Wolgast he made appear like an amateur in a ten-round bout and Joe Azevedo, a hard-hitting coast fighter he si[illegible]ned up with his left mitt, the right being completely out of commission from the fourth round on.

THE remarkable feature about Charlie White's development is the fact that his left hand is every bit as dangerous as his right. He has wonderful control over this obstinate member, which he brings into play during a battle with hooks and jabs, holding a smashing right-hand drive in reserve.

He had no intention whatever at the start of entering the boxing profession, but on finding he was gifted that way has, by grit and gameness, under the careful guidance of Nate Lewis, his manager, worked through almost unsurmountable obstacles and landed at the front, with the championship almost within his grasp.

He is a credit to the profession and a living example to other young boxers of what perseverance and clean living will do.

He comes of a family of fighters. His brother Jack was knocked out by Stanley Yoakum a few months ago at the Colorado Athletic club. This is one incentive for Charlie taking on Yoakum, with the distinct purpose of cleaning up the family slate.

The other brother fights under the nom de plume of Billy Wagner, and has made some good time through the East.

Stanley Yoakum, who takes the other end of this professional quarrel, was born in Hartford, Conn., May 1, 1890, and came West about ten years ago, where he has developed into a fighter that has seen nothing but the hardest kind of knocks through Colorado, Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and southern California, where a fight is a fight, and no fancy frills go from start to finish, and since starting his ring career in 1910 he has done nothing but get into some of the toughest ring tangles that ever a fighter butted into, but at the finish Yoakum was always the boy that had his glove pushed up into the air by the referee, and many times helped carry his opponent to his corner.

Yoakum is an aggressive battler, always coming, and no amount of punishment so far delivered by fighters who have essayed this task has been able to stop him, and it remains to be seen whether Charlie White can work out the puzzle.

There is nothing fancy about Yoakum's style of boxing, but what there is of it has brought substantial results, and that goes a long way toward putting a boxer on a solid fighting basis in any man's country.

SINCE making Denver his headquarters Yoakum has met and defeated such tough ones as Red Butler, Rudy Unholz, Steve Ketchell, Leo Kelly, Walt Walters, Harry Reide, Joe Sherman, Jack White and Ray Campbell, and is considered by Western fight critics as the second Battling Nelson and a veritable demon in the ring, who can't be hurt by the hardest hitter in the lightweight class.

The fans call him familiarly by the name of "Soakum," which cognomen comes either from his ability to soak up the other fellow's wallops or his well-known method of soaking his opponent with a few timely clouts that run his batting average away off up yonder.

To make a long story longer, the genuine interest this battle has excited all over the country leads me to believe that it will nearly telescope the big fight between Gans and Nelson Sept. 30, 1906, at Goldfield, Nev., in point of attendance. We have certainly got the big arena in Denver to accommodate the crowd. It has a seating capacity of 14,000, and is constructed so that an unobstructed view can be had from any point in the building, which does away with the old familiar yell of "Down in front," which in itself is a blessing.

THE bout was negotiated for the benefit of the visiting Elks, and special plans have been made for their accommodation to and from the arena and during the performance.

Taking the bout all around and the arrangements that have been made by Matchmaker Johnny Corbett and Promoter Cal Chesire, it will rank as one of the best conducted exhibitions in the pugilistic game ever witnessed in this or any part of the country.

HERE they are—Charlie White of Chicago on the left and Stanley Yoakum of Denver, who will battle for lightweight honors in Denver July 14. The winner in this match will battle for the world title with the victor in the Ritchie-Welsh bout.

RICKENBERGER WINS SIOUX CITY RACES

Bert Dingley Fatally Hurt at Tacoma, When Car Turns Over

SIOUX CITY, Ia., July 4.—Traveling an average of 78 miles an hour, Eddie Richenbecher drove his car to victory in the 300-mile automobile race here today and captured $10,000 of the $25,000 prize, $15,000 being divided among the other contestants.

Spencer Wishart made a desperate effort to capture first money and failed, finishing three and a half laps behind Rickenbecher.

Ralph Mulford, whose car was disabled on the seventy-fifth lap, took the place of his team-mate, Thomas Alley, when the latter was burned by an explosion of gasoline at the pits, and finished third after a close race with Anderson, who landed in fourth place.

Patschke finished fifth, and Wetmore and Shrunk in sixth and seventh.

Rickenbecher's time was 3:49:02; Wishart's, 3:51:20; Mulford's, 4:00:26; Anderson's, 4:01:64; Partschlee's, 4:02:56.

One of the remarkable features of the race was the freedom from accidents, only one of the drivers, Alley, being injured.

TACOMA, Wash., July 4.—Cooper in an American car won the Montamarathon race of 250 miles at the speedway today. Bert Dingley and Mechanician Swanson were perhaps fatally injured when their car turned over. Dingley, who was in second place, was rushed to the hospital.

Denver Cyclist Wins Dodge City Motorcycle Race

DODGE CITY, Kan., July 4.—Glen Boyd of Denver, Colo., won the 300-mile motorcycle race here today in four hours, 25 minutes and 26 seconds, on a two-mile track.

Three persons were injured. John Eggleston of Forth Worth, Tex., received a broken collarbone and Henry Glenn of Atlanta, Ga., was knocked unconscious, when Glenn rode into Eggleston's back wheel. Carl Airhart of Kansas City suffered several broken ribs when his machine skidded before the race began.

ROW AMONG CASEY FEDS; TEAM STANDS BY MANAGER

Stovall Tells President That Team Would Not Play Until Harry Neily Had Been Reinstated

KANSAS CITY, July 4.—C. C. Madison, president of the Kansas City Federal league club, announced before the first game today that Harry Neily, business manager, had been discharged. Neily appealed to George Stovall, manager of the club. Stovall, after a conference with the directors, who, it was said, upheld Madison, announced that unless Neily was reinstated, the club would not go to Chicago. Members of the team agreed to stand by him.

Finally, a few minutes before train time, the agreement was reached whereby the case will be placed before President Gilmore.

RITCHIE TO FIGHT WELSH TWICE; WILL NOT ENDANGER TITLE

If Defeated by Briton Will Have a Chance to Get Back Crown

BY RINGSIDE

NEW YORK, July 4.—Willie Ritchie, champion lightweight of the universe, and Freddie Welsh, premier 133-pounder of the British Isles and possessions, have signed to fight 20 rounds at the Olympia in London during the week of November 4-11, this year. Ritchie and Welsh will first settle their differences in the Olympia next Tuesday, July 7, in a bout scheduled to go a score of rounds. Ritchie's lightweight title will be at stake in the July 7 bout, but it is a mooted question whether there will be a championship to fight for when these two get together again in November.

Ritchie insisted upon articles for a second meeting being signed before he would subscribe to final articles for Tuesday's match. Ritchie is not apprehensive of the outcome of the first bout, but is merely taking a precautionary step of securing a return match in case he is unfortunate enough to be deprived of his title next week.

Wise Little Willie.

Mr. Ritchie is as sagacious in his dealings out of the ring as he is when giving a practical demonstration of his prowess to an antagonist in the arena. It took William over a year to prove to the public that he was a fighting champion, and one worthy of the laurels. Now he is instructing the dear old populace in the advanced art of "getting the kale."

The arranging of the second fight before the first is even fought has ring adherents looking askance at Tuesday's battle. It is taken to mean the pair have a "gentlemen's agreement" to go through next week's fight in lackadaisical fashion, and to fight the best they know when they come together again in the fall.

But in demanding that articles be signed for a return match Ritchie is showing sound business judgment. In all probability the champion lightweight made a superficial examination of ring records, and found that there were quite a number of champions who never received a return match with the men who knocked them out of the title.

Ritchie evidently recalls that Johnny Kilbane never gave Abe Attell a chance to regain his featherweight title; that Tommy Burns was not afforded an opportunity to retrieve his honors from Johnson; that Jim Jeffries ignored Jim Corbett's repeated requests for another bout for the title; that Jim Corbett spurned all of John L. Sullivan's pleadings for a return fight.

History Gave Him Hunch.

Also he remembers that Ad Wolgast did not fight Battling Nelson again until it was too late for the durable Dane to win back his title, as Ritchie himself had stepped in during the interim and had dispossessed Wolgast of the lightweight championship. Ritchie was magnanimous enough to give Wolgast another chance at his lost title, and that the "Michigan wildcat" failed to gain even a point decision over him was no fault of Ritchie's. Willie's spirit of fair play prompted him to give Wolgast another crack. Now that he is done with him it is quite unlikely that he will ever meet Wolgast in the ring again.

It is still fresh in Ritchie's mind that Kid Williams shows no inclination of fighting Johnny Coulon again after having relieved him of the bantamweight championship only recently.

Ritchie has viewed his negotiations with Welsh from every angle. He feels that once Welsh snatches his title away, the Briton will never consent to meet him again. So before affixing his signature to final articles for the July 7 meeting, Ritchie made Welsh sign articles calling for a return match.

Of course, Welsh appears to be the one to profit by this arrangement as, if he should lose on Tuesday, he would get another whack at the title Ritchie so dearly covets. Anyway, leave it to the ring champions to devise ways and means of securing the most compensation for their work.

It is probable that only one American will compete in the French open golf championship tournament, which takes place over the Le Tocquet links on Monday and Tuesday, July 6 and 7. Francis Ouimet is the only Yankee who intends participating. The American open title holder recently won the French amateur title and he is desirous of taking home with him both French titles.

URGANDY GOWNS WITH VELVET COATEES A SUMMER FANTASY

Tendencies in Summer Gowns and Cape Wraps; Horse-Hair Aigrettes and the New Veils

NEW YORK, July 4.—In the early part of the season taffeta gowns with little trimming, complicated and bizarre cuts and shapes, together with the vogue for combining colors and fabrics, made it seem that lace and embroidery were relegated to the chimney corner. But as the season has advanced there has been a decided change, and lace has come into the foremost ranks of Dame Fashion's faithful guards.

Chantilly, embroidered net, and metallic laces—gold, silver and silver combined with steel are among the newest and most popular of the weaves.

Some charming gowns have been made with shoulder capes and Henry IV capes of chantilly and embroidered net. A black cob[illegible] covers a waist of cubic design, subduing the harsh, crude colors into an artistic creation.

Another frock in which lace is used in an unusual combination [illegible] a bodice of lace simply draped, while the skirt has the tunic of chantilly with a circular velvet band at the bottom. The lower skirt is also of lace, and a velvet belt with a gorgeous velvet rose completes the costume.

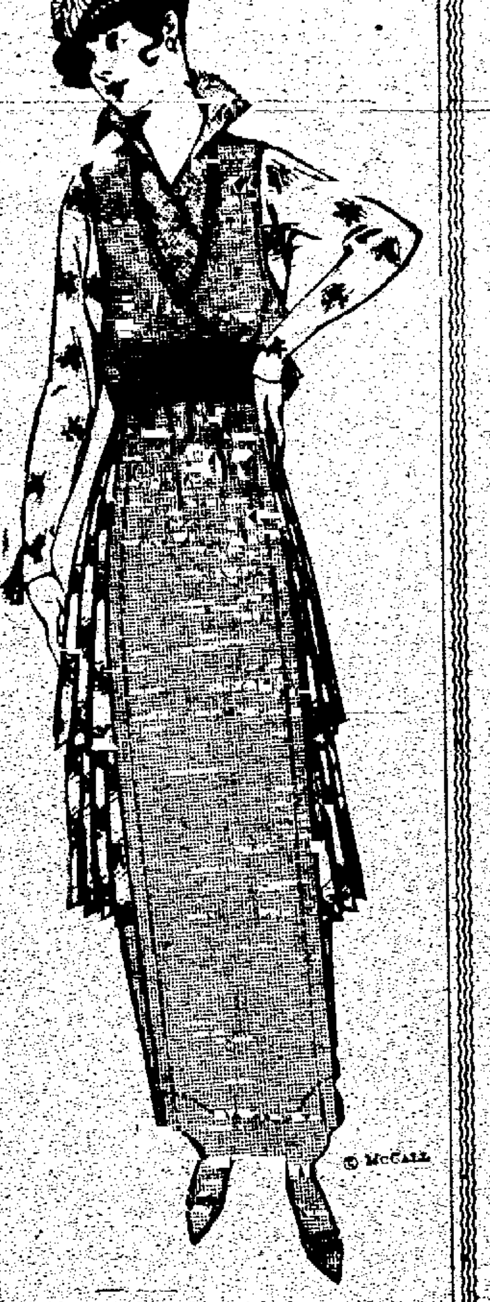

After lace comes maline, which is richly handsome in black, veiling a gown of cream-colored lace, girdled by a brilliant sash.

Organdy is having a great vogue in Paris. It is used for tunics on gowns of satin, in both black and white, and is trimmed with bands of satin, and—Shades of Past Hot Summers—bands of fur!

Whole organdy dresses are worn a great deal, especially with the charming coatees of taffeta and faille silk. The very newest of these little wraps are made of black chiffon velvet. The materials of winter have invaded the summer. Will the fabrics of summer dare face winter?

Two simple but charming summer models are shown in my illustrations. The first is a dress of stripped gingham and plain chambray. An entirely new note of trimming possibilities is shown in the striped gingham, with its stripes placed crosswise instead of the usually accepted method of having them go up and down. The raglin sleeves are of the stripes, while the front and back of the waist and the straight tunic are of plain tan chambray.

A silk dress is never amiss in one's wardrobe, for it will save many an hour at the ironing table, and is always ready for emergencies. In the second illustration is shown a dress of blue taffeta, with an underwaist and pleated ruffles extending across the back to the edge of the front, of white crepe de Chine, stamped with a charming pompadour design. This is a frock which may serve as a suggestion for many different ways of using materials. It would be charming in all one color, and would also be striking if the treatment of the materials were reversed, and the taffeta used for the [illegible] and the crape de Chine used for the front of the skirt [illegible] overwaist.

For evening [illegible] the frocks are very plain, with long, straight bodices, which have little or no trimming upon [illegible]. The skirt is its own [illegible] being cut in a very [illegible] effect. The little fish-tail train [illegible] to have had its day, for [illegible] just clear the floor. Of [illegible] and [illegible] see a dinner [illegible] with a [illegible] train, but even that is [illegible] so that it [illegible] disposed of if the measure of the dance allures too strongly.

Capes are having a wonderful vogue, which will undoubtedly last into the winter and be adapted to fur for the colder months. At present they are lined with brilliant and heavily brocaded linings. Soft, thickly piled materials, such as duvetyne or plush, will be used for these, and will, no doubt, be as effective as the capes in the lighter-weight materials. The winter wraps will undoubtedly be closer fitting than the summer ones. The attractive summer tailored suits are being made with these cape wraps, and many dresses in such materials as heavy, coarse linen and pique are made with capes of the same.

A great deal of brocaded silk is being used by young and old. Evening slippers are made of the same material as the gown, or in cloth of gold or silver, one of the fabrics handsome enough to wear with these exquisite gowns.

The trend of hair-dressing seems to be toward the knot at the nape of the neck, or high and close to the head, as most of the new hats are very closely fitting turbans.

Fancy ornaments, such as tiny feathers in diamond-studded mounts, are worn in the hair. These ornaments cannot fail to be most popular, as they far surpass those worn in former years.

The manufacturers are working overtime to make new feather fancies of numidi and ostrich with which to trim our hats. And our old friend Dobbin will no doubt come in for his full share of popularity.

It is a far cry from the little bird in a tropical forest, to whom we are so indebted for our aigrettes, to the stable with its shaggy maned and long-tailed horse; but from the horse in the stable comes the greater part of the wonderful imitation aigrettes which are replacing so effectively those obtained at the expense of the bird's life. This same hair is used for the horse-hair braids and trimmings which wear so well. Beware of imitations, however, for the imitations get sticky and soon lose all luster, oftentimes getting torn if the least bit damp.

The veil worn during the spring after the mode called "harem" is the forerunner of the present style. We will no longer be snugly pinned into our veils. They come in a variety of meshes, the most popular being bordered with dots or lace. For the devotee of the heavy veil, heavy laces are arranged on a light elastic, pinned around the chin and very tight in the back, the top of the veil with its elastic edging being so placed at the edge of the hat brim as to make it possible for its wearer, when she wishes to eat luncheon to drop it down from the top without otherwise disarranging its adjustment.

WINKING AT VENUS

[illegible] Able [illegible] Signal a [illegible] Friend" of Mars

From the New York Sun.

Two noted astronomers have got into a friendly discussion as to whether Mars is inhabited or not, and whether the great necessary expense in an effort to communicate with Mars by signals would be justified. Another eminent astronomer says, in substance, that Mars and Venus are surely inhabited by living beings of some kind, but that, the atmospheric conditions of Venus being similar to those of the earth, the probability of its being inhabited are greater [illegible] of Mars.

Now, with all this [illegible] talk of signaling to Mars, no one yet has got down to "brass tacks" with a plan of how to do it, or its [illegible] important item. By any [illegible] however, its cost would [illegible] that of the Panama canal look like the traditional "30 cents."

Owing to the fact that the orbit of the earth is inside that of Mars any signaling that may be aimed to that planet must necessarily be done by electric or other powerful lights and at the time [illegible] that [illegible] is its [illegible] the earth, or about 40,000,000 miles distant. Unfortunately for purposes of signaling at this time the earth is between Mars and the sun and would be invisible to the Martians; it would at the same time be broad daylight in Mars, and the inhabitants of that planet must look in the general direction of the sun to see the earth, which, being dark on that side, gives no light and cannot be seen. [illegible] conditions are such that it is quite improbable that the most powerful light that could be produced or even [illegible] signal as the earth could compete with sunlight and be noticed on Mars, even through the [illegible] are [illegible] to planets. It would, therefore, be impossible for the earth to signal to Mars by any means we now have.

In the case of Venus, however, the conditions are somewhat different, her orbit being considerably smaller than that of the earth. In traveling around her orbit and at the time of her inferior conjunction with the sun Venus approaches to within about 26,000,000 miles of the earth, but is then [illegible] to us, as she is then between the earth and the sun. We could [illegible] at [illegible] by [illegible] spot, and Mars could signal us in the same way, but we [illegible] get no answer from Venus, nor [illegible] Mars, it being just as impossible for Venus to signal the earth as for the earth to signal Mars; any light either one could produce would be overpowered by sunlight. Consequently, if we were to attempt to send signals to Venus we should never know whether they had been received or not.

Figures show that to cover the 1,600 square miles embraced in this spot would use [illegible] planes. A plant of [illegible] horsepower would be required to [illegible] the planes. An army [illegible] would be needed to operate and attend to it. The cost of construction would be about $[illegible], while the [illegible] of the [illegible] and other [illegible] would be about $[illegible] a day.

We cannot signal Mars at all. We can signal Venus, but "is the game worth the candle?"

MAGGIE'S LAMENT

Mrs. Cronan heard her little granddaughter, Margaret, crying as if in pain and hurried to the child.

"[illegible], what is the matter?" inquired Mrs. Cronan. "Did you meet with an accident?"

"N-no, grandma!" sobbed Margaret. "It w-wasn't no accident. M-mother did it on purpose!"
